Several hunting seasons open during the month of November

By Norm Minch
During the month of November several hunting seasons open in Kentucky, including deer, rabbit, quail, grouse, squirrel, duck, quail, and falcons.

Immediately following the November 14-25 deer gun season, small game season will open November 24. Small game season is the most popular with Kentucky hunters.

According to the Jeff Bole, upland game program coordinator, small game hunting for rabbit, quail, grouse and squirrel should be good during the upcoming season.

"On a statewide basis, quail are up 24 percent over last year and rabbit populations have increased 15 percent," said Bole.

"Mud winters over the last two years have probably been the primary factor for the increase in quail and rabbit numbers," added the biologist.

Bole said that although grouse populations are still down statewide, there are some areas in the eastern part of the state where grouse are doing well.

"We've passed the lowest point in the downward trend experienced over the last few years and are now on the upswing in grouse numbers," said Bole.

The most dramatic increase in quail populations were recorded in the Eastern region at 47 percent, the Bluegrass region at 41 percent and the Central region at 33 percent. Western Kentucky showed a 9 percent increase.

Rabbit populations were highest in the Western and Eastern/Pennyrrol region and the Knoxville Bluegrass region. These areas showed a 34 percent increase over last year.

The Eastern Coal Field region reported a 13 percent increase, which along with some other areas that decreased from last year averaged a 15 percent statewide increase.

The Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources is conducting a statewide survey on quail and tail feathers from hunters.

"We're requesting hunters to participate in the survey by mailing in wings from harvested birds. Postage-paid envelopes for the survey are available from state conservation officers and district wildlife biologists," said Bole.

Information collected from the study of the wings and tail feathers aids in charting the progress of quail and grouse populations and managing the resources.

Hunters participating in the survey receive a report of the information collected during the season.

If you are interested in having a bird for Thanksgiving dinner, but not necessarily turkey, a four-day duck season will be open during the holiday weekend

November 26-29. Duck hunting requires a valid Kentucky hunting license, a federal duck stamp and Kentucky duck stamps.

Duck hunting will be on the point system again this season. Gamechecks are a predated species and may not be taken at any time during the duck season.

Goose season in the Eastern Zone opened November 8. The fallwater season, hunting and trapping, and the deer crutching season, also opens November 24.
