Age Discrimination

By Kentucky Attorney General David Armstrong

It is now against the law for most employers to enforce mandatory retirement for older workers.

As of January 1, 1987, a federal law took effect amending the federal Age Discrimination in Employment Act by removing the age 70 cap which permitted mandatory retirement at that age.

Under this new law, any employer that has 20 or more employees may not discriminate or otherwise have any employment practice affecting employees in the protected age range (40 years-old or over) that is motivated by or the result of age. While the new federal law protects employees against mandatory retirement after age 40, it should be remembered that local school boards, state government, and other employers as to whom the new law applies may terminate an employee based upon the individual assessment of the employee's ability, capabilities, etc.

GENERAL NEWS

From growing up to working together; a dynamic duo

By Linda Flemming
Of The Carlisle Mercury Staff

Double your pleasure, double your fun. That is what many would say about twins, but not about dentists.

Leon Riggs and Robert Sparks are 1bth dentists and along with professional association are best friends.

Both were born and raised in Pike County, Kentucky. They were in the same war together, just stationed at different places. Sparks went to Germany and Riggs went to Korea.

After the war, they met again at the University of Louisville Dental School, where they graduated in 1962.

Both had chose different fields of study before they took up dentistry. Sparks started out studying engineering while Riggs went on to study tool and dye making. But, somewhere along the way, they changed their mind, and ended up as roommates in dentist school.

Sparks and his wife Carol have two children. Their son David is a sophomore at Nicholas County High School, and their daughter Pam is studying dentistry at the University of Kentucky.

Riggs and his wife Virginia have no children. But Riggs said," we share Bob's kids".

Riggs and Sparks came to Carlisle in July of 1962. "Stanley Hutchins was here before we came with a partner, but when they both got ill, we decided to stay," Sparks said.

Carlisle is a lot like where we come from. The town is small and the people are very friendly.

Riggs and Sparks were enrolled in college under a rural scholarship program. That means when both dentists completed their education, they had to spend one year in a rural area. "That is how we ended up coming and staying here in Carlisle," Sparks said.

The services they offer are many and some unique. They do extractions, some oral surgery, general dentistry. Unique in sense that they still make dentures and repairs to them in their own office.

Being together most of time like these two have been, causes one to think of himself as a we. Everything is we.

Riggs was best man at Sparks' wedding and vice-a-versa. When both families lost their parents, they were both there for each other.

When they go to conventions and meetings without the other, people always ask where their sidekick is.

Both agreed they have seen some bad times over the years, but they have also seen a lot of good times.

With the fast spreading of AIDS, both dentists agree that they are vulnerable.

"We have started wearing gloves and masks to protect ourselves and the patients. As far as we know only one dentist out of New York has contacted the disease from a patient," Sparks explained.

They go back as far as childhood. They will be together for as long as possible. Their friendship has been and still is based on trust and a mutual understanding of one another.

A person would have a hard time separating the two both professionally and personally.

But then, who would want to?

MSU nursing program is successful

For the third time in a row, an entire class of Morehead State University nursing program graduates passed the national licensure examination. The list included Marsha Lyons of Carlisle.

Achieving this distinction were 26 students who earned their associate degrees in May, according to Dr. Betty Porter, MSU Department of Nursing and Allied Health Sciences chair.

"Morehead State's nursing program may or may not have bragging rights for record setting, but the faculty and students should take a great deal of pride in this achievement," MSU President C. Nelson Grote said.

"This accomplishment reflects a consistency of quality in faculty and students. Moreover it means quality health care for the people of our region as these new registered nurses begin their careers as health care providers," Dr. Grote added.

The National Council Licensure Examination for Registered Nurses is a comprehensive two-day test covering essential knowledge and skills considered necessary to be a safe nursing practitioner.

"The 100 percent success rate is something that all of MSU can take pride in," said Dr. Charles M. Derrickson, dean of MSU's College of Applied Sciences and Technology. Dr. Derrickson also commended the nursing faculty for its dedication and commitment to the nursing profession.
