Eye Openers
By Dr. Robert F. Pretzsch, Optometrist

THE FINE PRINT

Reading fine print is difficult for most people over 45. It's a normal condition known as presbyopia: the hardening of the lens in the eye that occurs as we grow older. This prevents the lens from changing shape so that light can be focussed as it passes through the eye. Different types of lenses can correct this condition:

- Full lenses - These can be used when you want to see "the fine print" and removed for seeing distant objects.
- Half-glasses - Halves of lenses allow the wearer to look over the lenses and see distances clearly without taking his/her glasses off.
- Bifocals - These lenses use a segment for reading and another for distance vision. The segments may or may not be separated by a fine line. For special occupations, the segments may be placed in special positions.

With your input, your optometrist will recommend the type that is best for you, and it will be easy to see the fine print again.

Breakfast promoting literacy to be held

Fifty Nicholas County community leaders will leap how a skilled work force is critical to productivity and quality both in any company and in any community at a breakfast promoting literacy, Wednesday, October 21, at Nicholas County High School hosted by the Nicholas County Adult Reading Program.

Between 10 and 15 percent of the nation's work force reads and writes at about the fourth grade level or less. In Kentucky, more than 400,000 adults are functionally illiterate.

About 200 similar breakfasts will take place simultaneously in communities across the United States as part of the national media campaign PLUS, Project Literacy U. S.

The goal of PLUS is to combine the power of television with local outreach to promote literacy. KET and the Kentucky Literacy Commission are coordinating the state's PLUS efforts.

The goal for the breakfast is to heighten awareness of our local literacy activities and increase community support in our fight against illiteracy, particularly as it relates to the work force," said Robert Poline, Nicholas Country breakfast chairman.

During the PLUS breakfast, guests also will preview the new documentary, "A Job to be Done." The documentary reveals startling statistics on illiteracy in the U. S. work force and airs October 21 at 9/8 p.m. CT on KET.

To attend the breakfast, contact Helen Hamilton at 289-7504 or 289-2264.
