Fooks takes Carlisle to Lexington stages

By Heather Methers
 Of the Carlisle Mercury staff
 The hot mercurial lights, a nervous twitch in the pit of your stomach and the shuffling of sheet music...
 It is not a musical ring squad, nor the big top going up on a circus with dancing elephants.
 It is one local singer, actor bringing a touch of local Carlisle flavor to stages of Lexington and beyond.
 Tommy Fooks, native of Nicholas County, took a part in a musical production sponsored by the University of Kentucky Theatre Department.
 Fooks commented, "The Man from La Mancha is a musical in which the plot is patterned after the story of Don Quixote."
 (According to Webster, Don Quixote is a fictional figure, who after reading books of romance and chivalry became crazed and tried to right the wrongs of society, and since charged, shamed his steed, a windmill he mistakenly thought was a dragon.)
 Fooks continued, "It was an open audition, I got the role of 'Padre' for the summer season."
 With his melodious tenor,
