Ford's Footnotes
By State Senator Ed Ford

The 1988 Extraordinary Session of the Kentucky General Assembly wrapped up its work last week, and Kentuckians will soon have their first legal lottery of this century.

As I told my colleagues when I presented the final amendment by the Senate for passage, it does not matter if we as individuals wanted a lottery or not. On November 8th the people spoke loud and clear saying Kentucky should have a lottery.

All legislators, regardless of our own personal preference, I believe it was incumbent upon us to write the very best law possible in order to protect the integrity of the commonwealth.

I think it is our responsibility to ensure all Kentuckians that the lottery is run honestly and fairly. We believe our final bill reflects the clear wishes of a majority of Kentuckians.

This law is the product of long hours of exhaustive work and study during the 13 legislative days of the session. It represents another milestone in the legislature's ongoing evolution as an independent branch of government.

As a legislator, I believe we have included in the new law sufficient oversight to gain the public's confidence while at the same time allow enough flexibility to let this new governmental corporation function like a business and not be restrained by bureaucratic red tape.

We were able to do this somewhat within the broad framework as suggested by the governor's lottery commission.

The games will be run by a State Lottery Corporation, headed by a president and governed by a seven-member board of directors.

In the final version of the bill, however, the board of directors will be nominated by the governor, subject to the approval of the Senate.

The president will be recommended to the board by the governor but actually hired by the board.

One of the most obvious weaknesses in the law suggested by the governor's commission was the "closed door" policy of the board's meetings and records.

We quickly corrected this glaring flaw. Any public undertaking of this magnitude, involving huge amounts of money, has the clear potential for abuse.

Common sense dictates that it should not be in secret. Our bill requires the lottery corporation to do what every other agency must do: Adhere to the Open Meetings Law and the Open Record Law.

We took several other steps to assure that the lottery is independent of politics and free from corruption.

Over the next few months, the actual lottery mechanism will be put in place.

The first proceeds will go toward a one-time bonus of one $500 for Vietnam era veterans, the only lottery money earmarked for any program. (No proceeds will be spent until after July 1990.)

This seems to be the type expenditure that is most acceptable to legislators recurring one-time appropriation.

All in all, I think this is the best possible bill we could write and pass with the time restraints imposed upon us. May I wish you all a Merry Christmas and a very Happy New Year.
