Did you know that the number one killer of children in the United States is the trauma they suffer as passengers in motor vehicle crashes?

Did you also know that the correct use of child safety seats is over 70 percent effective in preventing these senseless deaths and 67 percent effective in reducing the need for hospitalization? Tragically, less than half of the nation's young children are properly protected in their car safety seats.

February 7-13 is "National Child Passenger Safety Awareness Week".

Organizations representing governors, mayors, police, pediatricians, nurses, insurance companies, auto manufacturers, and safety advocates have joined together this week to fall on adult motorists to take heed to the timely reminder to "Be A Valentine For Life: Buckle-Up Your Family."

Parents and other drivers with children must be certain that the child safety seat is installed properly and used correctly every time the child travels in a motor vehicle.

Carefully review the safety seat manufacturer's instructions on correct installation and use. There are many different types of child safety seats available to the consumer, and each has specific instructions.

It is equally important that both children and adult automobile passengers are protected. Not only is protecting our child passengers the safe and smart thing to do, but it's also the law.

Every state now has enacted laws requiring young children to ride in safety seats. And, 31 States and the District of Columbia have safety belt laws for adults.

Children depend on us for almost every aspect of their day to day living. This Valentine's Day should serve as a reminder of our responsibility to protect that which is most important--their lives.

Arnold's Comments

The cautious anticipation is over and now the questions have begun. Following the introduction of the Governor's budget proposals, legislative committees prepared to move full steam ahead on many bills they were holding because of possible fiscal implications.

The House Appropriations and Revenue Committee commenced their hearing process into the feasibilities of the Governor's proposals.

And, bills other than those with a major fiscal impact began their flow through the legislative procedures that are required in order to become law. A House measure that would allow the Commonwealth to set up its own self-insurance plan also secured Senate approval and will be sent to the Governor for his signature.

House Bill 359, already given the "go" signal by House members, does not mandate that state government set up its own health-insurance plan but establishes the basis to allow the option. The bill was probably a result of the Blue Cross/Blue Shield of Kentucky's surprise cancellation last fall of the state health-insurance contract.

Both Chambers have already passed House Bill 307 that would offer directors of non-profit organizations more liability protection.

House Bill 402 also has been approved by House and Senate members. It applies to the voting requirements for city annexation. The measure lowers the percentage requirements from 75 percent to 55 percent of those persons voting to oppose a city annexation.

Bills that passed the House of Representatives this week include a measure that would make it more difficult to petition against ambulance districts.

House Bill 422 requires such petitions to provide the signatures of at least 25 percent of the taxing district's average number of voters in the previous four elections to put the issue to a referendum.

House Bill 311 was approved by a majority of the House and will allow private water companies to charge tap-on fees for new customers. Private companies cannot charge such fees now.

Another measure approved by House members would require the state Public Service Commission to approve any project by a water district that is financed through a federal agency.

Legislation that would focus on the importance of voting was also passed by the House. The bill would direct the Secretary of State's Office to sponsor a slogan contest to highlight why everyone should utilize their right to vote. The program, if finalized, would be funded through private contributions.

Another legislative measure would establish property tax rolls and driver's license registers as the master jury list.

The House Education Committee approved legislation that would allow teachers to order a minute of silence to begin the school day. The bill does not dictate what the silence is to be used for and does not mandate that the teacher do it.

I have received many letters and phone calls. Due to time constrains, I have been unable to answer all of them promptly. Please bear with me as I will respond to you as time permits.

I welcome any comment or input into any of these issues pending before the General Assembly. Please contact me in Frankfort by using the toll free message line at 1-800-372-7181.

HOW DO YOU PAY FOR A LONG CONVALESCENT NURSING HOME STAY?

✔USE YOUR SAVINGS ACCOUNT - If you are like most of us, it won't take long to use it up, and a fixed income may not be enough to cover the bills, either.
✔BORROW - Most senior citizens will find it difficult to borrow enough. And where will the money to repay the loan come from.
✔TURN TO RELATIVES OR CHARITY FOR ASSISTANCE - This alternative may not be available, or palatable, to many.
✔TRANSFER THE RISK TO CONVALESCENT NURSING CARE PLAN - This strategy is usually both the most desirable, cost-effective and affordable!

THE REAL PROBLEM IS THIS: Many people covered by Medicare and supplemental coverage believe they are fully covered for extended, convalescent care.
THE FACT IS - You are not fully (or even mostly) covered.
UNLESS - You have a "convalescent nursing care" plan to fill in this big and rapidly-increasing gap in Medicare cost reimbursement!
Coverage IS available. Look into it TODAY to PROTECT your assets from the HIGH COST of convalescent care!
ACT NOW to insure your family's financial security and peace of mind!

Headquarters Methodist Church now 109 years old

For a total of 109 years a church has stood atop the Headquarters Hill.

The Headquarters Methodist-Episcopal Church had its beginning during the period of the Civil War.

After deciding to organize a church, residents met in the old Buffalo Trace School house.

Elizabeth Paisal donated the land with the provision that there would be no cemetery attached to the church.

There was not a reason given for this provision and the mystery still stands today.

Lelia Hollar, long-standing member of the Headquarters Church, added, "Also, (in the provision) if the church ceased organization the land would go back to the original property."

After proper funds were collected, Scott and Clay Feaback and Henry Bell were contracted to build the church.

"A church with two doors, a popular design for Methodist Churches at that time, was built," said Hollar.

The two door church was a popular architecture design for Methodist Churches during the 1900's primarily for the separation of men and women.

This was not a law, only a tradition that the Methodist observed.

Later, the two-door system could be used for wedding services and for safety in the form of fire exits.

The Reverend David Stephenson and Reverend J.L. Harrison were in charge of the dedication ceremony for the new church in 1869.

"According to Perrin's History, the date was 1868, but when the new church history was prepared and the cornerstone found, the date read 1869," said Hollar.

The pastors of the original church were: A.B. Colledge, John S. Cox, P.H. Ebright, R.D. Lochbrow, Mike D. Murphy, H.J. Perry, H.J. Ramey, M.M. Roundtree, Cyrus Riffle, B.J. Whitman, N.H. Young, Dr. William Fletcher, F.L. Creech, J.S. Stargell, R. Calbert, J.R. House, Robert Howes, J.F. Hopkins, W.C. Stewart, W.H. Murisey, A.S. Golby, A.W. Inako, E.N. Early and J.S. Pineur.

"The first building remained until the early part of June, 1929 when the official board and members of the church decided to build a new structure instead of repairing the old one," said Hollar.

The old church had substantial damage to the roof and needed other major repairs, she explained.

Those on the building committee were: L.M. Gaffin, chairman; O.R. Gaffin, secretary; M.T. Kennedy, treasurer; C.M. Paisal, E.T. Gaffin, Thomas Toedvine and G.T. Asbury.

"More land was purchased from C.M. Paisal on July 2, 1929 and contractor Arnold Calvin was hired along with the Cynthiana Lumber company which supplied the building material for the project," said Hollar.

On July 21, 1929 the cornerstone was laid.

The cornerstone contained a copy of the Bible, Western Christian Advocate, The Carlisle Mercury, the church history, a photograph, list of pastors to that date, list of building committee and a list of church members.

"It was sealed by the Reverend J.S. Pineur," said Hollar.

The dedication took place later, on November 18, 1929.

"More than 1,000 were in attendance that day.

"Reverend Hyndman preached 'Lovest Thou One,' Reverend Trent read the ritualistic services, and Reverends Mitchell and Pineur also spoke in the afternoon," said Hollar.

"For some time the Headquarters Church was on the Cynthiana circuit part at the time with Bartsville, Mt. Pleasant and Curry, in Harrison County.

"Services were held every second Sunday," said Hollar.

After unification, Headquarters has been on the Mesefield charge with services on the first and third Sundays.

"We have class meetings the second and fourth Sundays following Sunday School and prayer meeting every Wednesday evening," said Hollar.

Pastors who have served since the new church has been built are: Charles Mitchell, S.W. Townsend, Henry W. Landreth, John F. Arnold, L.C. Godby, E.F. Burnsides, G.W. Kelly, S.B. Godby, R.C. Mynear, Charles Thaxton, W.R. Wood, Earl Curtis, Ben Cain, Randall Hill, Howard Ritchie, E.H. Gaines, Thomas Frymen, Howard Livingood Bruce Sheffield, Harold Casarta.

The present pastor is Reverend Roy Hunt.

"I think the church is doing remarkably well at this time," said Hollar.

"We have Sunday School every Sunday at 10 a.m. with attendance around 50.

"There are five classrooms beside the nursery and we have an excellent Sunday School teachers," said Hollar.

"We also have very active Men's and Women's Methodist groups that do a lot of work in the community.

"At the present time there is 112 members," concluded Hollar.

Lelia Hollar contributed a major portion of the information contained in this article.

Ford's Footnotes

By Senator Ed Ford

The focus of attention this past week in Frankfort was on the Governor's proposed budget. As was expected, the Governor's budget address was well received by the people throughout.

It is hard not to agree with a budget that promises no tax increases and few major reductions in services.

The legislature and several special interest groups are not quite as pleased with the message. Teachers, retired teachers, and fish and wildlife interests especially have been in contact with legislators complaining that their agency funds are being used unfairly and illegally to balance the budget.

Also the low recommended pay increase for teachers and state employees is under fire.

Hearings on the Governor's budget began last week in both the House and Senate. One question that kept popping up was about some of the assumptions upon which projected income is based.

Some legislators expressed concern that $20 million dollars would not be voluntarily paid by delinquent taxpayers under the proposed "Tax Amnesty Program". Also questioned was the projection of a $30 million windfall by moving up the date of transfer to Frankfort of taxes collected by businesses.

Another controversy arose over a directive allegedly sent to all Executive branches of government preventing any employee from communicating with or assisting a legislator or legislative staff member without reporting all conversations and inquiries to the Cabinet Secretary.

A memo circulating from the Cabinet for Human Resources indicated this directive included all routine inquiries from legislators attempting to assist their constituents with problems.

I think it goes without saying that such a relationship between state employees and legislators elected by you the people to protect your interests will have a chilling effect.

A bill allowing the state to establish a health insurance program for its employees won final approval in the Senate. This bill is viewed as a slap at the Blue Cross and Blue Shield.

In 1987 an attempt was made by Blue Cross to cancel the remaining year of the state's health coverage for 67,000 workers and teachers. When the state threatened to sue, Blue Cross reversed its position.

Governor Wilkinson has indicated he supports the states ability to set up such a program and is expected to sign the legislation.

Kentucky has a reputation of being last in education too often. When we are leading in an area I think it is certainly worth noting.

Breaking the cycle of undereducated parents whose children, in turn, become school dropouts, is the goal of a new Family Literacy Project funded by the William R. Kenan, Jr. Charitable Trust of Raleigh, North Carolina, which is to be administered by the Southern Regional Education Board in Atlanta, Georgia.

The thing that makes this program of particular interest to us is that it is patterned after Kentucky's Parent and Child Education Program (PACE).

The Kentucky General Assembly passed legislation in 1986 as part of our education reform package.

Our program is funded by the General Assembly and is operating in 18 rural sites in our state.

The Kenan - SREB program will be administered by Sharon Darling, the former executive director of Literacy Concepts and who also administered the statewide adult literacy and PACE program while with the Kentucky Department of Education.

I have also received an inquiry from Louisiana about Kentucky's PACE program. They have shown an interest in sponsoring a similar statewide program.

If you wish to contact me on any legislative matter of interest, you may leave a message on our toll free line. Call 1-800-372-7181.
