Nicholas students learn water management

Nicholas County's third and fourth grade students will be learning about the wise use and management of the state's unique water resources through "The Adventures of Colonel Kentucky," an instructional workbook featuring Colonel Kentucky and his horse, Churchill.

These two unique characters and a host of villains and heroes will provide Kentucky students with an adventurous course of study in water conservation and pollution prevention. The environmental curriculum was developed by the National Resource and Environmental Protection Cabinet in cooperation with the Kentucky Department of Education. Not the essential skills objectives.

Colonel Kentucky leads students through various episodes of environmental episodes which blend humor and information about the care of Kentucky's water resources. The program's student workbooks are designed to address many subject areas and are supplemented by exciting resource materials which are provided free of charge to teachers during Cabinet sponsored in-service training.

"The Adventures of Colonel Kentucky" is jointly sponsored by the Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Cabinet and the Department of Education, Nicholas County, Kentucky.

COMMUNITY SPOTLIGHT

Saltwall Methodist Church has served its members for over a decade

By Heather Mathes
 For 100 years the Saltwall Church has filled a spiritual need for its members in Nicholas County.

The original structure which housed the Saltwall Church was built in 1879 upon land donated by Sarah Abner.

In November 1916, 27 years after the first structure was built, a new church was dedicated in the same spot.

On November 27, 1968 the members of the Saltwall community rededicated the church.

According to information from Virginia Fryman, new retired treasurer of the church and writer of its history, Reverend Jeff Bask delivered the message at the dedication.

Part of the rededication ceremony reads: "We thank you of your presence in the country made... to be in their place at Church on Sunday or for mid-week prayer meeting."

When the Saltwall Church is mentioned the memory of Aunt Sid Marshall, Uncle Gus Gowan, Uncle Louis and Aunt F. Kenney, Aunt Vera (Be) Gowan linger in our minds.

They seem to encourage and challenge us to be as faithful and rewarding as that we too have a place to fill.

His wife Glessia is the home-based teacher in the Nicholas County School System.

They have five daughters, Janice, 16 months and Bethany Ann, 8 months old.

Virginia Fryman said, "We have 57 members to date and have an active Methodist Women's group."

She added, "We meet once a month and make plans for missionary work."

Saltwall Church also has young people active in philanthropy.

"Our young people make 28 or more trips to take to school."

Fryman has been treasurer for the Church for 27 years but has retired this year and the office of the treasurer is now filled by Mrs. Keith Smith.

At the rededication ceremony these final words were read, "As the Saltwall Church stands here in this valley may it ever remain as a light-house to those who tread these country roads that lead to the north, south, east and west of this rural community."

A Methodist Church has stood on this spot in Saltwall for over 100 years as the first church was dedicated in 1879. This new church was built in 1916. (Heather Mathes Photo)
