MMI stressing farmers' unity

To aid dairy farmers who are especially hard hit buy this spring's escalating feed costs and this summer's drought, Milk Marketing Inc.(MMI), the regional dairy marketing cooperative, is urging all dairy farmers and milk processors to work together to keep farmer incomes' up and milk supplies accessible.

Current milk prices to dairy farmers are the lowest paid in the last ten years.

According to Gordon Riehl, MMI general manager, the most efficient fix for this financial burden is to negotiate for higher pay prices for area farmers, thereby keeping producers in business and assuring local milk processors of adequate supplies of milk to meet consumer needs.

"This would mean the development of a marketing technique that would include all procers and all handlers in our region. All milk produced in our area, whether by a co-op member or not, would be pooled, or marketed together. We need to develop a unified marketing concept so that the increased costs now faeing producers and increased returns that could be derived from this program are equitably paid for by all handlers within the market and equitably shared by all producers in the market," explained Riehl.

A pooling arrangement is a method of equitably collecting the total money value of milk delivered to all processors in a market are and equitably distributing the money to all producers in that area. In order for such a pooling arrangement to be successful, nearly 100 percent participation would be required of all processors and producers in a market.

This "super pool" arrangement would mean an immediate, additional 50 or 60 cents for each 100 pounds of milk produced by area farmers. Because of the effect of the increased feed costs for dairy animals, the drought has lowered prices for slaughtered animals, and expected cuts in the federal support price, dairy farmers' net cash Income for 1988 could drop as much as 70 percent, according to the National Milk Producers Federation (NMPF), Washington, D.C.

"Our members are getting hit doubly hard by this drought. It's devastating feed crop production, so that means escalating feed prices. If farmers can't afford to pay more for feed, they are forced to sell their animals for slaughter. And we're already receiving reports about falling prices for slaughtered cattle. This drought is threatening the liquidation of many dairy herds," says Riehl.

"This drought has devastated many farmers and their crops. Even if we now get some rain, it's too late. Some crops can no longer be saved and farmers have been forced to send cows to slaughter. You can't get those cows back into production," says Riehl.

Ohio State Farm Management Specialist Gary Schnitkey says "As a general rule, some cows should be culled rather than severely limiting their forage intake. To conserve the most forages, cows should be culled as soon as possible."

"At the current milk and feed prices, a 15 percent increase in feed costs equate to an effective reduction to the farmer of 50 cents for 100 pounds of milk marketed. This drought means farmers are already experiencing the same Impact as a price cut," says Jim Barr, NMPF's Chief executive officer.

"And with the expected decreases in the federal support price mandated by the 1985 Farm Bill,we need a $1 more over the blend prices in 1989 and a $1.50 in 1990, just to stay at the 1987 levels," says Riehl.

The blend price is a price formula, used by the United States Department of agriculture, based on the final usage of the milk and how much is used for which purpose- bottled or processes--in a specific market.

The 1985 Farm Bill Calls For calls for mandatory 50 cent price cuts in the minimum federal support price each in the next two years if milk supplies are not reduced to predetermined levels.

Farmers in the region can not survive," says Riehl.

"If this next 50 cent cut goes into effect producers in MMI's territory will loose more that $77 million. Our job is to return the best price possible to our members. Now is the most important time for all dairy producers to join together to market their milk. We need unity in the marketplace, the ear of Congress, and lots and lots of rain," he Explains.

MMI is a 7,000 member owned cooperative encompassing an eight state midwestern are including Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Michigan, New York, Kentucky, Maryland and West Virginia. Last year MMI marketed more than 4.1 billion pounds or 475 million gallons of milk.

Report to Kentucky

SENATOR WENDELL FORD

U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C. 20510

Many Kentuckians still are recovering from the devastating drought of 1983, and a repetition of that experience could prove disastrous for farm families and rural communities across our state.

As of this writing, precious little time remains for the onset of rains that could save this year's major cash crops in Kentucky and across much of the nation. Livestock producers already are suffering severe economic loss as withering pastures become incapable of sustaining cattle, and other drought related problems worsen by the day.

If our hopes and prayers are realized, this drought will be broken before it is too late for Kentucky and many other states across the nation. Whatever happens, we will have the past. And we will have failed that test if we haven't moved as quickly as possible to mobilize a drought-relief program to avoid the bureaucratic delays and frustrations that contributed to so many of our problems in 1983.

With that in mind, I have been encouraged by the began hearings last week on a wide range of possible reactions lose no time in evaluating the programs and resources currently available to our farming communities and determining whether emergency legislation might be needed.

I believe that some steps already taken on behalf of livestock farmers are helpful--as far as they go. The U.S. Department of Agriculture has designated at least 90 Kentucky counties in which livestock farmers can sign up to make emergency use of hundreds of thousands of acres that normally would be off-limits under various farm programs.

Farmers in all of the listed counties are eligible to hay and graze land that had been set aside under federal wheat and feed grain programs more than 70 of those counties have farmers with land in a 10-year Conservation Reserve Program(CRP)--and, as of this writing, that time has been temporarily opened to having but not grazing.

I am a very strong supporter of our much needed conservation programs. Yet I am disturbed by the Administration's reluctance to allow emergency grazing of cattle on CRP pastures that have been withering rapidly and might not yield enough bay to justify the expense of harvesting.

Many farmers have viewed this CRP issue as an initial test of the Administration's willingness to do what is necessary on behalf of droughtravaged farm communities. I agree with them that the Administration has fallen short. There could be no excuse for a continued ban on grazing of our CRP acreage.
