Who Says The Full-Size Chevy Truck Is Better? Ford Owners Do!!

MORE POWER.
Chevy uses Ford's power. Chevy's standard 4.1L Vortec V6 engine with Electronic Fuel Injection gives you a maximum of 160 horsepower (15 hp more than Ford's). Plus, Chevy offers a standard 5-speed manual transmission. And with a full-size Chevy, you get up to 13,900 lbs. of towing power, when properly equipped. And depending on the Chevy you choose, there's a number of available accessories to consider, including the 7.0L, 7.4L and 7.4L V8 engines and the 4.2L V6 diesel, and available transmissions including the 4-speed automatic, 4-speed manual and 4-speed automatic with overdrive.

MORE CORROSION PROTECTION.

MORE CARGO BOX STRENGTH.
Chevy's massive new frame is bigger and heavier for better load carrying ability. Plus, Chevy's new all-welded cargo box mounts directly to the frame from below so there are no exposed bolts to trap water and cause rust. Ford's doesn't.
