Wanda Welch

Welch has interesting vocation

Many times women feel they have a choice between either full-time mother or a full-time career.
One Nicholas County has joined 36,000 other women who have found the gray area in between and have satisfied both their children and themselves in a job well done.
Wanda Welch, Home Interiors Inc. Representative, explained why and how she got started in her "at home" business.
"In 1983 I just got tired of being Allan's and Whitney's Mom, and even though I love my kids dearly, I believe a woman must be someone else for a change."
"She continued, "My sister Nancy was in it about a year before I was and invited me to one of their potluck meetings at Home Interiors, and I just fell in love."
Although having a business in your home seems the ideal situation, the affects on family can be devastating. Welch said, "It is hard on your family when your business is in your home, because you can't leave the job at the workplace."
"You just have to learn early to take time for your family because you need their support if anything is going to work out."
"Many times I just take the phone off the hook at dinner time so we can have that time together."
Support providers needed, open door number one, husband, Wendell.
Welch said, "I just cannot say enough about my husband, he's just perfect."
"He has always been there when I needed support, and he always has been there when we needed help," she commented.
But providing time for family is one of the most important duties in the Home Interiors Inc.
Welch explained further, "Mrs. Crowley (the late Mary C. Crowley, founder of the company) set down three beliefs to base the company on.
"First, this is a Christian company, then comes our family, foremost important, and then we have our career, which is there to find you over and make you better for your family."
According to Welch, Crowley not only set these standards for the company, but for herself as well.
"She wore this necklace to the meetings and there was two shovels on it, and she said the small one was what she gave to the church and the larger one was what God had

We have a huge selection of fine quality monuments, large and small, simple and elaborate, to adequately fit any need.
"All women have a talent in putting things together, that's why our husbands don't look stupid when they walk out the door."
"My kids are my biggest critic when I put a board together, like when I think I'm done."
