

GENERAL NEWS

City of Carlisle Firemen were called to a car fire, August 24, in the alley behind Clay Hunt's Ashland, near West Main Street. A fire of unknown origin was extinguished with an extinguisher under the hood of a 1977 Dodge owned by Brenda Hogg. There were no injuries reported. Hank Bond Photo

All four tires of this Carlisle City Police Cruiser were slashed with a knife early Sunday morning, Carlisle City Police Chief Allen Earlywine said. Though Earlywine declined to comment if police have suspects, he did say an investigation into the incident is underway. Josh Shepherd Photo

Workers for Donald Robinson Masonry take apart the Nicholas County Courthouse creek stone wall facing Main Street to straighten the wall foundation. Workers are saving most of the creek stone to be used to piece the wall together again after work on the foundation is finished. Josh Shepherd Photo

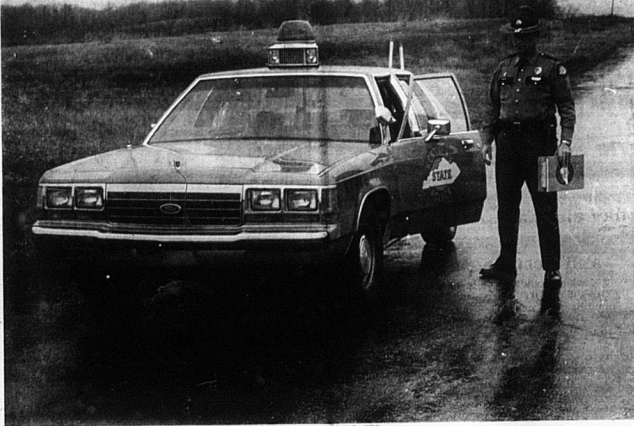

Nicholas County Fire Chief Mark Hughes investigates the cause of a fire at the home of Harrison and Mary George on Moorefield Road Monday morning. Hughes said the fire was possibly caused by a combination of old electric wiring and high humidity. Volunteer fire fighters spent time removing burnt insulation and venting out smoke from the house attic. Josh Shepherd Photo

Seven from Nicholas attend SOAR

Seven Nicholas County High School students recently completed an eight-week class in Career Development while working on the University of Kentucky Lexington campus. They were among some 100 Kentucky high school students who graduated August 4 in the fourth annual SOAR (Supervisor's Occupational and Academic Return) Program. SOAR students are selected by their high school counselors based on their potential for success and the benefits gained from career guidance and job experience. In addition to attending class and going to work, the students had their choice of evening classes areas such as karate, weight training, dance, aerobics, performing arts and computer literacy. The group also took week-end trips to Mammoth Cave, the Kentucky Horse Park, the Louisville Zoo and Redlands baseball game, and Opryland. The SOAR Program was made available 112 students from 23 Kentucky counties and five area development districts in the state. The Bluegrass Area Development District Provided 36 scholarships - valued at $3,000 each - to students in five counties: Anderson, Nicholas, Lincoln, Elliott and Powell. Rebecca Blake, Orville S. Carlisle, received an award during the eight-week program. She was honored during SOAR's graduation ceremonies held August 4th in the UK Washburn Theater. UK basketball coach Rick Pitino was a guest speaker at the ceremony. Continued on Page 14
