The Family Life Skills curriculum...

Dr. Tom Scott, representing a committee appointed to devise a curriculum for the state required Parenting and Family Life Skills education program...

In the early stages of the program, children will be taught the importance of self-esteem, physical health, and family values...

In high school courses, more contemporary issues will be discussed such as in-depth studies of sexually transmitted diseases...

To an extent, STDs will be a part of the education throughout the program...

In the K-4 level it will be an introduction of oral and bacterial infections...

There is a provision for trips to attend science fairs at Murray State University...

Bill is questioned. John and Bogie Hall appeared before the school board...

John Cleaver said the matter is a difficult one to resolve because the board would need to find a way to treat students equally...

There is a time limit on getting the proposed curriculum for the Family Life Skills program to the state board of education for approval...

In the fourth grade, he said, parental changes will be addressed because it is during this age when most children begin entering puberty and need to understand, in basic terms, the changes occurring to them...

In the next stage of the program, the committee decided it would be of greater advantage to split boys and girls into separate classes because they are trying to do and have a problem, but the committee feels in the long run, when people understand better what we are trying to do and have a problem, but the committee eventually met with acceptance...

But John Hall said the situation involved is unique and the initiative of other students to the need to establish a representative...

"I think five trips representing Nicholas County High School at these points is something to consider," John Hall said.

Superintendent Don Elder said he had talked with Nicholas County High School Principal Greg Reid about the situation and Reid had said the school had never covered such costs before.

However, Elder said Reid was supposed to have contacted the Halls about the situation.

In other business, the board accepted the resignation of head football coach and junior high social studies teacher Robbie Barr, high school social studies teacher Wilbur Winkle, and Helen Hamilton, coordinator for Adult Reading Program.

The board went to closed session to fill the position of role of bus mechanic and head of the football coach, with David Smoot re-naming himself from the vote because of family relations.

Richard Gaudin was named to fill the position of school bus mechanic.

Representative Arnold urges participation in U.S.D.A. feasibility study for cooperative

Many Studies and much energy have been expended by many groups and individuals about crop diversification for Kentucky farmers.

As I mentioned at the beginning of this article, efforts at the federal, state and local levels are being made to see if farmers want to grow supplemental crops.

One local effort, Kentucky Farmers First, Route 1 Box 414, Bowling, Kentucky, has mailed to many farmers in the Licking River area a questionnaire hoping to get their response and showing of interest in crop diversification.

Kentucky Farmers First is working with and has the help of USDA in preparing the survey to form a Farmer's Coop.

As a member of the Kentucky Farmers First, I want to encourage all Farmers to complete and return the questionnaire (which appeared in The Fisherman Record and The Carlisle Mercury) by July 15 so the group will be able to determine the farmer's interest in order for them to know which direction for them to pursue.
