Representative Remarks

By Representative Adrian Arnold

During the past decade or so, one state out of fifty has addressed school finance in some governmental level. Kentucky is spending today less than an education system that will be the envy of the world by the end of the 20th century. Every child entering school today will graduate from high school in the year 2000. They should receive a diploma that will give them the ability to enter a workforce, so they can maintain a middle class lifestyle, whether they are rural Kentucky, Appalachia, or the Golden Triangle. A curriculum is needed in our schools that will provide a thinking workforce. Kentucky needs citizens who can analyze a problem, make choices, and deal with uncertainty. And, finally we need the revenue to pay for a state-of-the-art educational system. As members of the General Assembly who are responsible for this new creation we are hopeful. It is a moment in history that will never come our way again. The United States is a leader in the world of information technology. We must use it to educate the leaders of tomorrow's society.
