Be aware with wreathes

NEW YORK (AP) - When buying a wreath, be aware that the longevity of cut evergreens varies.

According to a study by the University of Oregon, reported by Christmas Ridge Handcrafts, a nonprofit wreath-making program of the Christian Appalachian Project in Lancaster, Ky., Noble fir stays fresh up to two months. Cut hollyhorns begin to lose needles after about two weeks. Douglas and Fraser fir last about six weeks.

To judge the freshness of a ready-made wreath, gently pull on a needle and bend it. The needle should snap on. Choose a wreath that is somewhat moist to the touch and has pliable needles. As it ages, an evergreen wreath will start to fade to a gray-yellow and the needles will begin to feel stiff and eventually fall off.

The colder, moister and shadier the locale, the longer an evergreen wreath will last. Mist the wreath can help, and keep it out of direct sunlight if possible. The best wreaths are made with many layers of boughs. For outdoor wreaths, ornaments should be weatherproof and securely attached. A sturdy metal hanger and frame are best.

The Christmas Ridge wreath ($50-$150) is $25 via mail order. Also available from firms such as White Flower Farm of Litchfield, Conn. (800-888-7156) are fragrant, herbal wreaths made of nutmeg, hibiscus, safflower, eucalyptus, strawflowers, baby's breath or other wildflowers and herbs ($60). A more austere eucalyptus wreath embellished only with a thin red ribbon is $55.
