From The Notebook No vote - No Voice

Now that the general election is drawing near it is time to begin giving very serious consideration to voling November 7.

In the City of Carlisle races, 10 candidates are battling it out for six council seats, while four have announced for Mayor.

In the country races, all offices are unoposed, with the exception of the Nicholas Country Judge – Executive position where G. C. Myers is mounting a write-in campaign against effects of the country with the incumbent. Reese Smoot, the incumbent.

Reese Smoot, the incumbent.
Wayne McGee (unopposed) will fill one of the district judge spots, while Donald Wells of Falmouth seeks to unseat Wayne Fitzgerald in the other district judge spot.
Robert McGinnis, who has been serving as district judge, is running unopposed for the cir-district judge, is furning unopposed of the cir-cuit judge's position.

As you know, each of the positions outlined have an impact on the area we live in and the way we live. It is important you make personal ons and get out to the polls for the gen-decisions and get out to the poins of the general election.

Don't sit back and not vote or not get involved and then be satisfied to complain if the outcome is not what you want. No vote – no voice.

Convention happiness

Without question I am quite proud of their accomplishments. Not only are their works recog-nized by the newspaper industry, but their con-tributions make your Carlisle Mercury the best possible publication.

It's nice to know these children take what they do seriously.

Pam Bowles, Lisa Doyle, Josh Shepherd, Marilyn and I were also honored with awards. It was pleasant to know The Mercury fared pretty well with such a small staff against much larger competition. The judging involved several hundred entries.

From Left Field By Josh Shepherd

To quote one of my pastors during Easter ton, Merry Christmas, for those I won't see until then. Yes, television advertisers have once again started celebrating Christmas in record time, just before Halloween. The Ibility Christmas albums come early, I guess to give time for the shipping, but I can't help but feel a little disgruntled bout the whole thing.

No holiday is celebrated with as much verve or as much pre-holiday hoopla as Christmas. None is surrounded with as much myth as fact. much myth as fact.

What happened to Halloween, or for that matter, Thanksgiving, which came up on me so subtly last year, I wouldn't have

After the last Veg-O-Matic commercial and the report in the Wall Str that Ronco went under, it was like B.B. King singing The Thrill is Gone.

Since that time, advertising has gone

Since that time, sadvertising has gone high budget and quite despiciable, especially in children's toys which always promise far more than they give. Some assembly is still required ship batteries still are not included, though to do either requires at least a-four year engineering degree at MIT.

But I am going to take a stand. I refuse to watch any Christmas television special until after the ghosts and goblins have landed and gone, the Pilgrims have given thanks and the Bengals have finished their game.

Goodness knows I won't have missed much that I can't catch up on in the final

But, I'm going to let you all in on a little secret. Christmas is just not the same for secret. Christmas is just not the same for me since flore wend out of business.

They were the first commercials to come that learning Christmas, but he needn't worry about any November, and though the company greed has accomplished the task.
