Tobacco Season Assessment

By Mike Phillips

With the burly tobacco auction recessed for the Christmas holidays an assessment thus far would reveal a report card very favorable.

Anxious moments always run high just prior to the opening of the burly market. I have been talking with several local farmers on the tobacco floor just before the sale began, most felt the prices would fall in the $1.70 to $1.73 range with better grades commanding top prices with lesser quality tobacco receiving a larger reduction in price.

The opening sale of tobacco, on the Paris market, belonged to a Nicholas County farmer, Grover Livingood. The first basket sold for $1.75 with the remaining baskets of the crop bringing a similar price.

After several rows had been sold the tempo seemed to be set and the trend for the 1990 marketing season established.

Each year prior to the opening of the tobacco marketing season tobacco company representatives call and indicate the companies want the tobacco graded by stalk position.

We in turn relay this message to the farmers. For the past several years the tobacco companies have not bought accordingly.

Prices have held fairly steady with nearly all offerings selling for $1.74 to $1.77 per hundred.

The most noticeable difference in composition of marketings was an upward shift in the percentage of mixed grade appearing for sale with less leaf tobacco as we neared the Christmas break.

The season figures stand at 450.6 million pounds returning 174.42 per hundred.

No season up through the recess had been placed under government loan.

All of the tobacco farmers I have spoken with seem very pleased with the market thus far.

It is my belief that the market will reopen at the same level prior to the Christmas break.

Farmers do have mixed feeling surrounding the new proposed law that will permit the sale of tobacco quotas in the burly area.

If signed by the President, having been passed by both houses of Congress, it would allow burley farmers to sell farm quotas from one farm to another so long as it is within the same county.

This was proposed to help alleviate the underproduction of burley tobacco. Underproduction of burley tobacco quota has been a major problem for the burley industry.

The Nicholas County tobacco quota is presently being produced. The major portion of the underproduction problem stems from Tennessee where only on-half of the total state quota is being produced.

Another aspect of the law is a quota of less than 1,000 pounds and require a referendum for cross county leasing in Tennessee and Virginia.

Farmers don't forget your pesticide certification cards. We will be conducting meetings in the upcoming months to get this matter handled before the spring rush.

We want to pause and wish everyone Happy Holidays from the Extension staff.
