What Jesus Taught

By George L. Rogers. The power goes on as usual. Two young high school students were involved in an automobile accident. The girl was badly injured and the boy was killed. Evidence showed that the couple had been drinking. Upon finding this out, the girl's father flew into a rage and said, "Just let me get my hands on the person that sold them the liquor. I'll kill him!" After returning home, he went to get a drink to "quiet his nerves" but found that his bottle was missing.

My friends, inquire is a powerful thing. We cannot live one way and expect our children to live another! The father who whipped his son for drinking and cursed God himself while he whipped him, did more harm than good. The mother who punished her daughter for using pocket money and defamed her name, did more harm than good.

Most of our training comes from the example we set for our children. There is an old Spanish proverb that says, "The ash in the shoe of the parent is the stone in the shoe of the child." Do you want your children to be honest, truthful, and generous? If the answer is yes, then you had better show them that first in your life. There is such great power in an example.

As a most unkind person, Jesus prompts his disciples to love and serve. He "poured sweat into the basin and began to wash the disciples' feet, and to wipe them with the towel with which he was girded." (John 13:15). We should have washed their feet, but we have given you an example that you also should do. I have done so for you (John 13:15). There never was a more striking picture of loving humbleness service than the picture of Jesus who served us. So I do not wish to serve one another. Jesus realized the power of an example.

It is said to be a discipline, "Ye are the light of the world. Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven." (Matt. 5:16). If the world would see Jesus, I had to let them see the lives of Christians. This has not changed, and that is what He taught.
