What Jesus Taught by George L. Rogers

There are many people who are Christians, but not all of them are Christians. Jesus taught that a Christian is one who believes in God and follows His commandments. He taught that we should love God and love our neighbors as ourselves. He taught that we should be obedient to God and His Word. He taught that we should be pure in heart and single-minded in our love for God. He taught that we should be meek and lowly in spirit. He taught that we should be patient and kind. He taught that we should be gentle and lowly in spirit. He taught that we should be peace-loving and merciful. He taught that we should be self-controlled and sober-minded. He taught that we should be diligent in our work and in our study of His Word. He taught that we should be faithful and steadfast in our love for Him. He taught that we should be true and honest in all that we say and do. He taught that we should be pure and blameless in our hearts. He taught that we should be without guile or deceit. He taught that we should be without hypocrisy or pretense. He taught that we should be without malice or envy. He taught that we should be without anger or wrath. He taught that we should be without pride or arrogance. He taught that we should be without selfishness or self-interest. He taught that we should be without greed or covetousness. He taught that we should be without lust or desire for the things of this world. He taught that we should be without hatred or bitterness. He taught that we should be without unforgiveness or grudges. He taught that we should be without bitterness or resentment. He taught that we should be without envy or jealousy. He taught that we should be without rivalry or competition. He taught that we should be without pride or conceit. He taught that we should be without boasting or bragging. He taught that we should be without vainglory or self-promotion. He taught that we should be without hypocrisy or pretense. He taught that we should be without double-mindedness or wavering. He taught that we should be without instability or inconsistency. He taught that we should be without fickleness or changeableness. He taught that we should be without dishonesty or deceit. He taught that we should be without lying or falsehood. He taught that we should be without slander or gossip. He taught that we should be without backbiting or maliciousness. He taught that we should be without envy or jealousy. He taught that we should be without rivalry or competition. He taught that we should be without pride or conceit. He taught that we should be without boasting or bragging. He taught that we should be without vainglory or self-promotion. He taught that we should be without hypocrisy or pretense. He taught that we should be without double-mindedness or wavering. He taught that we should be without instability or inconsistency. He taught that we should be without fickleness or changeableness. He taught that we should be without dishonesty or deceit. He taught that we should be without lying or falsehood. He taught that we should be without slander or gossip.
