Hamon's newest member

Over the past several months the Nicholas County Conservation District has had articles featuring district supervisors in an effort to introduce you to those who serve as supervisors and are interested and dedicated to the better stewardship of our resources.
The last member to feature and who is also the newest member of the board, is Allan J. Hamon. Dr. Hamon became a district supervisor in January 1989. He is wide from his medical profession, enjoys farming. He grows corn and tobacco and also has registered Angus cattle, which he and his wife Ann enjoy working with.
Dr. Hamon, along with the other six supervisors has been given overall responsibility for the conservation of soil, water, and related natural resources under the direction of the district officials. All district officials also have the responsibility to share their expertise and information with those who seek to understand and care for the world around them.
Some of the administrative responsibilities Dr. Hamon shares with the other supervisors is to attend and participate in board meetings and functions; review and approve conservation agreements; take an active role in developing the district's annual plan of work and budget; participate in developing district conservation needs and setting district priorities in providing technical assistance to landowners and operators for a complete coordinated soil conservation program on their farms; participate in developing annual reports to the public; and share with the public information on the district's activities and programs.
