Wilkinson may ask for Flag Amendment

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Governor Wallace Wilkinson said last week he "would not rule out" having the General Assembly this year consider a proposed constitutional amendment to outlaw burning of the American flag.

Wilkinson has previously said he might call a special legislative session to enact environmental and drunken-driving laws. The General Assembly would not otherwise meet until January 1992, one month after Wilkinson's term expired.

Wilkinson's order will exempt certain farm products

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Governor Wallace Wilkinson says he'll issue an executive order to preserve a sales tax exemption on agricultural chemicals and over a million tax bill for farmers.

The governor noted law-makers have placed a constitutional amendment on the November ballot that would allow them to veto regulations immediately during the years between sessions.

Paris will host All A boys and girls tourney portunity to vote on that issue, it will be like motherhood, apple pie and it will fly like crazy," said Republican Sen. Jack Trevis of Lexington, the Senate majority caucus chairman.

If an amendment reached the House or Senate floor, "it would be ratified," said Eise, of Winchester. "With it having tight through committee — probably a committee with a lot of lawyers on it — who knows what would happen?"

It's just the politically popular thing to do," said Rep. Paul Bach. "We're coming up on a governor's election and it's just like taxes" as an issue.

Few lawmakers, regardless of their personal views, will feel they can afford to oppose a flag desecration amendment, Garrett said.
