Summer heat program is designed to give aid to those in distress

Summer heat isn't just uncomfortable, it can be life threatening. More than a week before summer officially begins...

Harrison counties is kicking off its Summer Cooling Program on July 5. The program helps by loaning air conditioners to low-income elderly and disabled individuals who are in life threatening situations...

apply the Community Action Council, 149 Serranus Road, Carlisle, or call 289-7172 for doctor's statement indicating more information. Applications must bring a verification of his or her household income, a signed statement indicating to the program should also be provided.

For individuals who can't escape the heat, especially the low-income elderly, summer is a dangerous time. As the temperatures rise, so does the risk of heart attack, stroke, and heat-related illness.
