 South Central Bell
 Service to others - the Pioneer purpose
 Blind youngsters in Kentucky can play softball, thanks to the creativity of some of the 6,000 Telephone Pioneers in Kentucky who have outfitted softballs and bats with sound devices to permit real homers and real fielding in a game aptly dubbed "beep ball". These same children hunt Easter eggs, led by chirping sounds imbedded by Pioneers in plastic eggs.
 But Pioneer efforts are not restricted to the visually disabled. They have refitted tricycles so children's arms can provide the momentum that their legs cannot. They have built entire parks and playgrounds designed for the disabled. Pioneers have contributed approximately $100,000 to Kentucky's Child Victim's Trust Fund, since the Fund was started in 1963. Service is a natural habit for members of the Telephone Pioneers of America. They belong to the world's largest industry-related fraternal organization. Organized in 1911 by men and women who were the true pioneers of the telephone industry, the Pioneers have counted among their members a stellar list of those people who made - and continue to make - the telecommunication systems in the United States and Canada second to no other nation in the world.
 As volunteers, Telephone Pioneers strive to make the world a more hospitable place for every living thing. Pioneers are often the court of last resort when all else fails - when there is no food, no shelter, no funding available. Add to that their professional and technical skills and you find roadblocks smashed in the most ingenious ways.
 Do you know of an unmet need in our community? Just look in your phone book for the Telephone Pioneers of America and call Tom Tucker at 875-3308. The Pioneers like to help - just like they've been doing since 1911.

Buster the Bus visits NCES
 The Carlisle Mercury Staff
 CARLISLE - Buster the Bus entertained children from the local Head Start and kindergarten classes last Friday morning at the Nicholas County Elementary School.
 Buster, whose show includes dancing, wheelies and flashing lights, was a big hit with the squealing, laughing school children.
 Buster is a miniature little red wagon. Buster has all the lights and features of a regular school bus.
 Buster is controlled by a remote control device. The purpose of Buster and his complicated circuit is to teach children how to safely wait for and board buses.
 It's an awareness training program for children from kindergarten to the third grade. The controller of the Pupil Transportation Division of the Kentucky Department of Education.
 Dudson hides behind a wall or curtain and provides the voice for Buster. He also holds down his regular job at the Pupil Transportation Division and takes Buster on the road three days a week.
 We do 300 shows around the state," Dudson said.
 I've got a partner who will do around 100 and I'll visit around 200 schools myself. Our goal is to instruct 145,000 children this year.
 Buster is in many ways Dudson's baby. The long time Department of Education employee wrote the program and the grant request for Buster and took him to his pilot programs.
 We ran five pilot programs during the summer in Fayette, Scott and Shelby counties," Dudson said.
 Dudson and Buster also visited the Kentucky State Fair this summer.
 Buster performed 53 hours at the state fair and we give out 40,000 children's coloring books. We watch the children's coloring books are important to Dudson. Every child in attendance at a

Buster performance receives a coloring book and these help reinforce the lessons Buster is to teach.

 "Buster number 2 went down in Pulaski County," Dudson said, "and we had to send off to Utah to get a fuse for him."
