Nicholas Co. H.S. KET Star Channel School of The Day

Nicholas County High School has been selected as "School of the Day" for Thursday, November 15 in KET's Star Channels distance learning course Probability and Statistics.

One of the schools from Kentucky and 18 other state receiving the satellite-delivered, live interaction high school course, Nicholas County will be featured in the course's 11:00/10:00 a.m. CT section.

Students enrolled in the course are Jeremy Havens and George Joseph. The on-site classroom facilitator is Kay Earlywine.

"School of the Day was implemented so that students in the distance learning classrooms across the country can meet their peers and share school spirit", said satellite classrooms teacher Tom Gravias. "It's a fun way for the students to get to know each other better."

Featured schools send in photos of the members of the class and the classroom facilitator and, if they choose, a T-shirt, sweatshirt, or other school spirit apparel carrying their school name or mascot. All students receive a geography lesson as well when a map pinpointing the featured school's location is shown.

On the day a school is featured, Gravias begins the class by talking on air with the students at that school. "Unlike a traditional classroom, the students would not get a chance to meet each other without this element, " Gravias said.

Other KET courses offered by satellite are Physics, German I, and AP Calculus. Discrete Mathematics is offered as a companion course to Probability and Statistics each spring.

What Jesus Taught

By George L. Rogers

The New Testament of the Bible was written in the Greek language. To defend instruments of music in Christian worship some have made an argument from the Greek word "psallo." This word in one of its forms is found translated in Romans 15:9; 1 Corinthians 15:14; James 5:13; Ephesians 5:19. In these passages the word is translated into "sing", "sing praise" (or "sing psalms") and "make melody." "Psallo" means, "to rub," "to wipe," "to pull out," "to pluck off," "to strike," etc. The Greeks used the word "psallo" in various ways. One could "psallo" his beard by pulling out some hair; one could "Psallo" a tree by striking it with a stick. The word was also used with reference to striking and twanging the strings of an instrument. These definitions are from Mr. Henry Thayer's Lexicon (one of the most classical works on the subject.) Mr. Thayer adds that in the New Testament the word "psallo" means "To sing a hymn, to celebrate the praises of God in song." (See Thayer's Lexicon, p. 675.)

The use of the word "psallo" necessarily implies an object or an instrument "psalloed." But, the object, or instrument has to be named! The instrument is named in the New Testament "making melody" in Ephesians 5:19 is from a form of "psallo." Paul named the instrument; he said that in our singing we are to make melody with our hearts. The heart is the instrument to be used in singing, not the harp!

This "heart" is not the blood pump, but it is the spirit. Dear readers, pay close attention to the words of Jesus, not to human tradition. The heart is the instrument to be used in singing. Therefore, "I will sing with the spirit, and I will sing with the understanding also." (I Cor. 14:15.)

When Christians sing they must strike the chords of their hearts; one must put all his heart into the singing of praises unto God. God demands this of his people. He will not accept a substitute in the form of mechanical instruments. What did Jesus teach about instruments in worship and praise to God. Nothing. The inspired writers of the New Testament said nothing. The early church of Christ did not practice it.

Report shows only one in three voted

Out of three adults in Kentucky, one voted, one was registered and failed to vote, and one was unregistered, Bob Babbage said after reviewing the results of the November 6 general election.

"That means two of three eligible Kentuckians are failing to be a part of the decision-making processes which affect their daily lives," Babbage observed.

"Only 1,682 of the registered voters in Nicholas County participated in the election," Babbage said.

"If you add the 30 percent of the state's eligible voters who are unregistered to the number of nonparticipating, it is easy to see that the wishes of the true majority are simply not heard," Babbage noted.

Voting records for the past 10 years show that usually more people participate in general elections than in primaries. The interest in the Constitutional Amendment concerning church property taxes credited for increasing the turnout above the expected 40 percent, Babbage added.

Babbage said that increasing voter participation has long been one of his priorities and that as a candidate for Secretary of State in 1991, voter education, registration and participation would continue to be a major issue.

"Persons interested in registering to vote may do so at their county clerk's office," Babbage explained. He added that the voter registration books will be open November 13 through April 30, 1991 for persons interested in participating in the next election.

"Since government reflects the society it represents, low voter participation can create an inaccurate reflection of the desires of the people," Babbage added.

Babbage added that citizens who fail to participate in the election process because they are displeased with government, are missing their best opportunity to make the changes they may desire.

"Many citizens also say that their vote won't count," Babbage said. "However, the statistics show that some recent elections have been won by about one vote per precinct. That proves that one vote does count," he added.

Babbage said that with only 1.8 million of Kentucky's 2.6 million eligible citizens registered to vote, his goal to improve voter participation creates an "exciting challenge".

"Kentucky can do better. Every adjoining state except West Virginia has a higher percentage of its population registered to vote and also has a better voter turnout," he said.

Babbage said he was examining the methods used in other states to increase voter registration and participation and the trends which affect Kentucky voters. These ideas will be used to develop a program to increase voter activity.

Tourism Talk

Tourism, Inc. thanks everyone who participated in the Antiques & Quilt Show on November 3 and 4. Mark Hatton, Loretta Mann and Gladys Shrout coordinated the antiques dealers. Julie Metzger and Gladys Shrout arranged for the quilts which were on display. Forty six quilts were enjoyed by over two hundred visitors.

The variety of patterns, colors and age of the quilts provided a most interesting exhibit. The oldest quilt on display was sewn by a Nicholas Countian in 1861. It presently hangs in the Blue Licks State Park Museum. Sam Devine, park manager, was kind enough to allow it as well as three other museum quilts to be part of the show.

In addition many local quilters' work was shown. The artistry of Nicholas County quilters is exceptional. Visitors from Louisville, Lexington, Versailles, Cynthiana, Paris, Maysville, Mt. Sterling and Cincinnati left the exhibit with an appreciation of the talents of the local quilters.

Those from out of town were most impressed with the show. One couple stated that they travel to many of the quilt shows in Kentucky, Tennessee, Indiana and Ohio. They were very pleased with the number of quilts on display, the excellent quality of the handwork and the manner in which the quilts were displayed. Several other visitors expressed their delight with the show and said they will look forward to coming again next year.

Many persons made the Antiques & Quilt Show a success. Tourism, Inc. gratefully thanks Sam Devine for his ideas and help in setting up; Mary Jo McCord, Betty Bussell, Julie Metzger and Gladys Shrout for setting up and taking down; Brenda Day and Esther Myers for taking down; Michelle Knapke for coordinating the refreshments; Eddie Brierly for making the pimento cheese; to all who donated food items to be sold; Pam Randolph, Betty Bussell, Betty Moss, Esther Myers, Michelle Knapke, Pearl Campbell, Brenda Day, Lucy Nell Stigall, Brenda Lawrence, Evelyn Shrout, Gladys Shrout and Julie Metzger for working during the show; to every person who so willingly brought quilts to be displayed and to the antique dealers who participated.
