 The department moved into the office two weeks ago.

Carlisle police move into new quarters

By Kara Reed
The Carlisle Mercury Staff

CARLISLE — You may have noticed something unusual near the corner of Broadway and Main streets. There are police cars there day and night.

The reason for this is the Carlisle Police Department has moved into its new quarters on that corner.

Carlisle Mayor Frankie Hughes said the department has been in the new office for about two weeks.

The new office is more spacious than the old office located at the rear of the city building.

Hughes said the location allows the police department to have better access to Main Street.

The front of the office looks like a picture window. From there, and not even half of it will be the officers can see Main Street just South Street.

In the rear of the building, the department had a porch built to the police can also see the other end of Main Street.

The work done to refurbish and the businesses located there.

Hughes said the location and the visibility will help the department.

"We can just about cover all of Main Street from here," he said.

He said one of the biggest improvements is the addition of two new radios. Hughes said the department can now dispatch to any part of the county and into neighboring counties.

"I'm proud of this new office," he said.

Hughes said the city budgeted $10,000 for a new office.

The state police also make use of the new building. Hughes said a breathalyzer is kept in the back of the office. He said the office can also be used by the state troopers when arresting people.

The Carlisle Police Department employs eight people full time and two part time.

Hughes said there are two people on duty 24 hours a day. He said there is at least one officer on the street and one officer in the building at all times.

Pastor Darrell Sexton and the Carlisle Assembly of God invite you to Revival, December 2 - 5 with Evangelists Blaine and Christine Bowman.
 Each service will begin at 7:00 p.m.

Blaine & Christine Bowman share God's Word through anointed music and preaching. Their modern country and light contemporary style music leads people in praise wherever they go. God has given Blaine the ability to preach the WORD in a way that appeals to all ages. Blaine & Christine feel God has called them to the "E" MINISTRY. They exhort, encourage, edify & equip the Body of Christ and evangelize the unsaved. They are definitely "JOY-HELPER" according to II Cor. 1:24.

You may laugh or you may cry, but it is certain you will be touched by the Spirit of God as you experience their ministry.

Ministering nearly 300 times a year they are a blessing wherever they go. Come CELEBRATE JESUS with the BOWMAN!
