Tourism Talk

With the renovation of the old county jail as the visitors center well underway, Tourism, Inc. is looking forward to the day when the building will be open to the public. Plans are for an area to house a pictorial display of the jail building through the years.

Old photographs which include the jail building, whether exterior or interior shots, will be of great importance to the project. Tourism, Inc. is also seeking photographs of the jailers through the years. These photographs will give glimpses of daily life in Carlisle during a particular era as well as provide a pictorial history of the jail.

Family picture albums are home to hidden treasures. Tourism, Inc. is asking that you look through your albums with the jail building and its early jailers in mind. We will greatly appreciate any photographs you are willing to share. Tourism, Inc. will gladly have a copy made of your photograph to include in the exhibit.

When the building is opened to the public Tourism, Inc. also wants to tell some of the stories concerning the jail. Recently James Sooty told how a young boy in the 1930's he and his father would stay overnight on the jail which in Carlisle on business. The cost of overnight lodging for him and his father was 25 cents and also included breakfast the next morning. Mr. Prather of Nicholas County tells that his father Ben Prather helped put the bricks back in place after the prisoners dug out of the building. Stories like these will help tell the history of the jail building through the years. If you have something to share about the jail or the jailers, please contact Gladys Shuler.
