Hamons enjoy Angus operation, farm life

By Tim Jones The Carlisle Mercury Staff CARLISLE — It is a busy week for the Hamons as the doctors walk across the green pasture toward two of her favorite pastimes.

American Angus Association. The cow must obviously be black (Angus was the old Scotch word for black) and can be white on its under. The white can extend to the navel, but not past this point.

Ann and her husband, Allen Hamon, were both raised on a farm and enjoy the farming life. That's the reason they've decided to raise Angus cattle.

Miller overuses a sizeable business as farm manager at Greentree. The farm has five tractors, a hay baler, a hay roller, a batting bush and a corn picker.

The Hamons started the farm with a mixture of commercial and registered cows and finally went to registered cattle only. The difference between the two methods is usually sold for beef while the registered cattle are raised to breed and are sold to other farmers for this purpose.

The Hamons also take advantage of American Angus Association programs to learn how to better cattle production. The Hamons have gone on the Angus Tour in Georgia.

Registered cows also meet certain criteria and are based on the rolls of the Dale Gilliam holds Tex, the pride of Greentree Farm, for a picture last Thursday. Tex is a young 1300 pound Angus bull. Greentree has over 100 registered Angus cattle.

4-14 halftime tie to defeat Nicholas County 20-21. Jennifer Caswell had four points, James McKee had three points and Rebecca Jolly had two points.
