From Philippines to Carlisle Villaflors come home

By Josh Shepherd
Of The Carlisle Mercury Staff

CARLISLE — Most Nicholas County residents are those who have been born and raised here. It is the only life they know and it is easier for them to continue to keep their family roots firmly on home soil.

For others, those who suddenly find themselves moving here, it is by some unforeseen chance that they come. When circumstances are just right, events turn in a certain order, people come to set roots and though they are shallow by some standards, they end deep.

For the Villaflors, natives of the Philippines, their arrival in Carlisle ten years ago, though entirely unanticipated when they first arrived in America, has, to them, become a form of homecoming.

Ruby Villaflor met and married Osias in the Philippines in August of 1958. They were together one month before she left for the United States.

When Dr. Villaflor's wife recounts general details of her life in the United States, it is somewhat odd that she and the doctor spent their first married year apart.

But then, when they met in Manila, circumstances had already dictated they be apart. Both were planning to come to America, to continue their studies in medicine.

She wanted a greater background in registered nursing than her own country could provide, and she said Villaflor wanted more studies in surgery.

Dr. Villaflor's education was earned primarily in the Philippines His pre-medical degree came from Silliman University, a Presbyterian institution in Cebu, Philippines. From there he went to the Jesuit founded St. Thomas University in Manila, a school of higher learning whose history is as old as Harvard in the United States.

When he concluded his studies at St. Thomas, he was equipped with a doctorate in medicine and surgery. But it was not enough. He wanted his training in the United States.

While taking his college boards in Manila, he met and married Ruby in August of 1958. In September of that same year they said goodbye. She would provide him by four months to the United States.

But even when he arrived, they would be separated by the distance between Albany, New York, where she was finishing her nursing degree, and Baltimore, Maryland where Osias became chief resident in surgery at South Baltimore General Hospital.

"He has come quite a long way from where he was born at Bacolod, Philippines," Ruby said. "When we first came to the United States, our intention was to learn all we could and return to the Philippines.

But suddenly we began to have a family and, with our children being born citizens of the U.S. it became more and more difficult for us to keep to our decision to return home," Villaflor said.

They acquired an immigrant's VISA in 1968 and became naturalized citizens in 1972.

In that time the became disenchanted with city life. Dr. Villaflor had a chance to become a permanent member of the hospital staff in Baltimore, but though they would earn a considerable living, city life, Ruby said, did not suit them.

Traffic jams, constant calls, the violence inherent in inner city life, was simply too much.

Therefore, the Villaflors moved to West Virginia, where Villaflor worked as trauma surgeon dealing with coal mining accidents and obstetrics for three years.

Dissatisfied still, they moved to Hancock in upstate New York.

Despite the bitter cold of winters here, the Villaflors felt they had established their niche in the United States and may have continued living there if not for the Hancock hospital closed, Ruby said.

"We had a great deal of success in Hancock. Osias and I made friends there that have continued to be strong even since we have come to Carlisle.

I think if the hospital in Hancock had been stronger financially and a few mistakes had not been made, we would probably be there still, which, on hindsight, we perhaps would not have regretted, but we would never have known Carlisle and that would be a shame.

Carlisle is our home," Ruby said.

In 1982, the Villaflors arrived in Carlisle. They had found, through contact with a friend, that this small Kentucky town still needed a surgeon to locate in the area. According to Ruby, it was the best decision they have made.

"By this time we realized we wanted some place to live where we felt comfortable. It didn't matter about money by this time. I guess that is the advantage of growing older.

"We only wanted a place where we were liked and accepted and, though we were nervous, being strangers to the area, we found a warm reception in Carlisle.

Then we knew, Osias and I, that we would live the rest of our lives here among these people. Our homeland seems so far away now, we feel we have always lived here. And here we will live until we are gone," Ruby said.

According to Hughes

County Fire Dept. Dying

By Josh Shepherd
Of The Carlisle Mercury Staff

CARLISLE — The Nicholas County Fire Department is within a year of dying, Nicholas County Fire Chief Mark Hughes said at the regular meeting of the Nicholas County Fiscal Court Tuesday morning.

Hughes appeared with other members of the Nicholas County Fire Department to ask the Fiscal Court for financial help in meeting operational costs of the fire department.

According to Hughes, the Nicholas Fire Department operates on one of the lowest tax rates he has ever known and has equipment maintenance expenses whith are beyond the amount of money they receive in taxes and through fund raisers.

"We need the Fiscal Court to try and match the money we get out of our tax rate in order for us to simply operate. Much of our equipment is becoming worn or obsolete and we aren't taking in enough financial support to keep us up to date," Hughes said.

Hughes reminded the court of the valuable service the department has given over the years, the property it has saved, and the drop in some people's insurance rates because of their existence.

"I realize the insurance rate drop extends only five miles from the station, but we called 1500 in two years ago to get at least that much dropped," Hughes said.

"We have tried to operate at the lower tax rate, but we can not do it any longer.

"State regulations demand we make continuous improvements on equipment and training of personnel. If we cannot get some support from the Court, I have no choice but to raise the Fire Department tax rate," Hughes said. "I believe the department is too valuable to let fall."

Court members did not deny the contribution the County Fire Department continues to make in Nicholas County, but several members said the court had no money to give in from the County budget this year.

"We have very little, if any money we can offer in the budget. I'm not sure if we can do anything," Magistrate Daryl Stacy said.

However, the court agreed that there should be some way the court can funnel additional financial resources to the department.

"This county must have a fire department," Juanita Smith said.

Judge-Executive Reese Smoot reiterated the Court's concern and requested Hughes return for the Monday meeting for a more intensive discussion of the Fire Department's standing.

Hughes said the department remains solvent at the moment by using its bank savings and 'deposit certificates, but the drain on that money will cut on the amount of equipment they can hope to purchase in the future.

In other business:

•The court heard from BGADD representative Mike Morgan on the three county emergency water plan. (See related city council story, page two).

The court adopted a resolution to join with Harrison and Bourbon Counties for grant money to develop an Emergency Water Supply plan.

•The Court has kept the tax rates the same as last year. Property rates are steady at 12.5 percent and motor vehicle and water craft rates remain at 13.6 percent.

•Opened bids for county wide solid waste pickup. No decision was made on which company would get the bid. Smoot tabled a court decision until Nicholas County Attorney Jock Conley had a chance to review bids.

•Court also opened bids on the purchase of a new ambulance. Three bids were made at similar cost, Smoot tabled a final decision pending a review from Conley.

•Accepted the Mathers Fund Board approved recommendations for disbursements in Nicholas County.

•Renewed a contract with the Franklin County Jail for housing 'juvenile offenders' and renewed the contract with the Kenton County Detention Center.

•Granted a six month extension to the Ale-8 one bottling company for payment of the county payroll tax.

•Agreed to grant Johnson Mathers Health Care first option on purchase of the new Doctor's office and extended the deadline for office completion to December 31.

•Magistrate Daryl Stacy said an interested party contacted him about purchasing court land where the Myers Station voting booth used to be located. However, records on the property are vague for the court to determine if the property is actually owned by the Fiscal Court, Conley said.

Court tabled a decision until details can be worked out.

The driver, McFarland, escaped through driver's side window, eyewitnesses said.

Nicholas County Ambulance Service personnel found Edwards and Purvis entrapped beneath the dashboard and the trees.

Using a crowbar and a large iron prying bar, Ambulance service member and County fireman Calvin Denton and Carlisle City Police officer Lamar Mann, forced the dash upward to release Edwards.

A call was sent for the Nicholas County Fire and Rescue squad to bring their Jaws-of-Life to cut the dash away and free Purvis.

To give the Jaws-of-Life improved ability to move the dashboard away, Jimmy Howard attached the rear of the vehicle to his tow truck and eased it away from the trees. Then teams moved down onto the embankment and by separating crushed parts of the vehicle's side they were finally able to free Purvis from the truck at approximately 10:16 p.m.

He was immediately transported by ambulance to Nicholas County Hospital.

HIGH SCHOOL — HIGH SCHOOL —

Application forms are being sent to all homes with a letter to parents or guardians. To apply for free or reduced price meals, household should fill out the application and return it to the school.

Children from families whose income is at or below the levels shown are eligible for free or reduced price meals. Foster children may also be eligible for these meals. Families with foster children should contact the school for information regarding benefits. Additional forms are available at the principal's office in each school. The information provided on the application will be used for the purpose of determining eligibility and may be verified at any time with each school district required to verify a sample annually. Applications may be submitted at any time during the year.

For school officials to determine eligibility, households receiving food stamps or AFDC must list the child's name, their food stamp or AFDC case number and the signature and name of an adult household member. Households not receiving food stamps or AFDC must list: child's name, names of all household members, social security number of the parent or guardian who signs the application (or an indication that neither possesses a social security number), the amount of monthly income received by each household member, identified by source, and the signature of an adult household member certifying that the information provided is correct. The information provided by the household is confidential and will be used only for the purpose of determining eligibility and verifying data.

Households that fail a food stamp or AFDC case number must report when the household no longer receives these benefits. Other households approved for benefits are required to report increases in household income of over $50 per month or $600 per year and decreases in household size. Also, if a household member becomes unemployed, or if the household size increases, the household should contact the school. Such changes may make the children of the household eligible for benefits if the household's income falls at or below the levels shown above.

Under the provisions of this policy, a school official will review applications and determine eligibility. If a parent is dissatisfied with the determination, he/she may contact the school either orally or in writing.
