If Happy had realized what he did, he just dove for cover. He would have been as surprised as anyone because he was a sports fan, bowing to the gods of the game.

Now maybe more people will believe today's sports.

The Clay County coach, you may remember, said that Jerry Brown, Maurice Morris and Carlos Turner were the finest trio ever to play in our high school basketball team in Kentucky's illustrious history. Fortunately for Indiana, just two years ago, the Hoosiers played against the Hoosier All-Stars when Kentucky turned back the best team in Indianapolis. It was, I think, the finest all-star game ever played in the historic arena between the bordering states. We're playing in the first year of this series. Dan Morrow got the job done nicely, thank you.

Brown, who has signed with Tennessee and Morris, who will go to Michigan, are the only ones who can qualify academically, as winners. They know it and you and what it takes to win. I'm sure most of the Indiana players would be glad to play for any team other than Morrow. He played his guts out, until he almost dropped. Then coach Randy Embrey yanked him and returned to help Brown with the game for Kentucky.

Down through the years, the game has meant more to Indiana than it has for Kentucky. That's why the series is so popular in four Indiana states.
But Brown and Morris, proud stars of back-to-back state championship teams, wouldn't let Kentucky lose at Indianapolis. And Dennis Horn and Keith Williams, two hard-playing, intelligent players from Takes Creek, Kentucky, returned, joined by Fayetteville from the starting lineup. Embrey carried new class when he saw it.

And now about Bryan Milburn. This old battle for Butte County looks like a Marine medal. He looks off on one line, I think, that's the only one he's in. I think that's the only one he's in. I think that's the only one he's in. I think that's the only one he's in. I think that's the only one he's in.

Happy went to his grave helping former players. Just a few years ago, he got the commissioner to find funds to pay for an operation for Fred Derriery, the Springfield, Ky. product who became a great pitcher with the Cincinnati Reds.

The New York writers would be well-versed toward Chandler when he talked about the deal. Leo Durocher, for a year because he consorted with gamblers.

Happy on Durocher
He's a few years ago when I was doing a TV show. I did 20 minutes with Chandler which was great. I know that I used to see it after his death, he said, "I know what you want, Padma. Let's roll!" I just did word association.

I was in Warren G. Bly, retired president of the National League and chairman of the Veterans Committee. I told G. Bly that I was in the Hall of Fame in 1982. He told me, "Well, you're in."

Happy, writers feed
When Happy became commissioner he was a real old timer in the minds of New York sports writers. They were all great. I was a sportswriter for the Chicago Tribune and worked for the New York Times. I was a sportswriter for the New York Times. I was a sportswriter for the New York Times.

The New York writers would be well-versed toward Chandler when he talked about the deal. Leo Durocher, for a year because he consorted with gamblers.

Chandler committed another mortal error. He sided with the players against his boss, the commissioner who hired him. Chandler was anxious that his three former baseball greats be inducted into the Hall of Fame. He was anxious that his three former baseball greats be inducted into the Hall of Fame.

Chandler and I spent most of the afternoon with the L&L coach when he brought his Tigers to Lexington last past season. When we ended our conversation, Brown took off for Versailles to meet him. In fact, as I wrote these words, I have on my wall beside me a picture taken at the Auburn football field of my son Scott and me with Chandler and UK coach John Brant.

Corn syndrome leaked to rain

A mysterious corn syndrome in which brown corn plants are falling over in the field may be the result of heavy rains shortly after planting followed by hot, dry weather, according to a University of Kentucky Extension agronomist.

"We've received calls from farmers in Henderson, Daviess and Union Counties about corn plants - from five to 25 percent in a field - falling over, on inspection, we found the only common thread to the mystery was planting date and weather conditions," said Jim Horkow, extension agronomist at the West Kentucky Research and Education Center in Princeton.

All fields showing the syndrome were planted in mid-May to late May and received heavy rains soon after planting. After the heavy rains, hot, dry weather developed, he said.

A common characteristic of the affected plants was almost non-existent permanent root system. Normally, the permanent root system develops about three-fourths to one inch below the soil line and takes over for the seed root system when it starts to grow rapidly, he said.

Inspection of affected plants indicated that permanent roots were developed at the soil surface. They were short and stubby, were not branched properly and had not penetrated the soil. Most affected inhibited growth and were dry or becoming dry. Brace roots were forming but
