Edgar Darrell put a lot of thought into choosing a heating system for the house where his aunt, Lillian Hamilton, lives in Carlisle. "We were looking for the most efficient system," he says. "And I think electricity has the best possibilities of being the most efficient—product to use in years to come."

Aunt Lillian likes the heat pump's comfort, cleanliness and safety. "I had such gas in the country," she says. When the heat cut off, it was a long time before the thermostat came back on, and the room got cool. The heat pump's heat is more steady. And it's very clean. It doesn't put out a lot of greasy fumes or dust. I feel like this is a lot safer, too. It's just wonderful. I wouldn't have any other kind, now."
