and other census geography. The data is, however, subject to correction. It was pointed out that census blocks and tracts are not legislative districts or precincts).

Honaker explained that the states, at some point, must match their own election geography in order to produce population figures for districts, precincts, etc. LCR staff is currently doing this.

The preliminary population counts for current precincts and legislative were ready in July.

The Census of Minorities and other population segments or state reasons for not changing the data. Based on statistical research in past censused and a post-enumeration survey this census (used to check validity of the census based on factors such as race, urban, rural, etc., and is under a court order to consider adjusting the data to make up for those differences.

In October, 1991, district and precinct data corrections and Geographic Informations systems (GIS) development will be complete, and staff will be able to provide a final data product and the technology to use it effectively.

This will allow the Subcommittee and other legislators time to prepare alternative proposals and, after the GIS is in place in October, refine those developed with preliminary data.

If all goes smoothly, redistricting plans can by in place before the January 28, 1992, filing deadline for state legislative and congressional elections.

The data provided in July showed some generalizations can probably be made statewide. For example, because population losses have occurred in eastern Kentucky and the growth has been in the center of the state, the eastern Kentucky districts--both legislative and congressional--will have to enlarge in ordered to add population.

She said the eastern districts are all underpopulated, based on legal criteria. Because of the loss of one district, all the congressional districts are now underpopulated and will have to pick up territory. According to the Census Bureau, the congressional district with smallest population is District 3 (498,395). The ideal population for congressional districts, based on six districts, will be 614,216.

Newman clarified terms used in redistricting. He said that "reappointment" is the process of redividing a given number of seats in a legislative body among established districts, according to a formula.

Certified City evaluation remarks

City of Carlisle has indeed met the challenge for upgrading their economic development and industrial development categories. The industrial development organization of Carlisle is to be complemented.

The tourism program is very well organized and enthusiasm is exemplary. Emphasis is on preservation and history which is perfect for a city of this size.

The City has an unusually well operated and managed water facility. They are to be congratulated.

Carlisle has an above average wastewater system operation and maintenance and management program. They are to be congratulated for their initiative and spirit of excellence.

My complements to the Chamber of Commerce and it's business committee chaired by Eddie Brierly. They have taken the recommendations of previous certified cities visits and actively put them to work. Would encourage you to continue your current activities and look for ways to expand the involvement to get the citizens of Carlisle interested in the core business section. The only detraction that I could find were weeds growing in various areas. This can very easily by remedied through above recommendations. Over all I was very impressed with the work of this committee and encourage you to keep up the good work.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor:

I am enclosing my check, in the amount of $20.14 for one years renewal for my sister, Mrs. Lena M. Bowman, 11 West Sixth Street, Paris, Kentucky 40364, subscriber No. 1044.

It has been over 50 years since either my sister or I lived in Carlisle. But we still like to keep up with what is happening in our home town.

Sincerely,
George P. Saunders
