Auditors find discrepancies in Carlisle payroll audit

By Andi Shephard
CARLISLE — Allen Long, of Long, Craft and Company, said there were many city workers not compensated time and a half for work over 40 hours a week.
Long, who presented his findings in an audit of the city's payroll, said several workers had logged over 40 hours a week and had not received the appropriate overtime pay.

The way to overcome the hurdle is improved record keeping of sick time and paid holidays, Long said. He also suggested department heads approve all time sheets before paychecks are made out.
In many cases, Long said, several workers were not keeping an accurate record of their time on the job. Long said they need brief training on filling out the time sheets clearly and accurately to prevent discrepancies in pay versus time worked.

In other business, Councilperson Betty Barton said a number of constituents on Kennedy Heights have asked her to bring up the age old problem of annexation of Dove and Mockingbird into the city limits.
The complainants are genuine. There are several people disgruntled over the fact that a fairly large population of people are receiving city services without paying city taxes to support them.

However, as in times past, efforts to annex the two Catherine Street offshoots have been defeated in elections.
According to procedures, City Attorney Skip Watson explained there must be an intent to annex ordinance drawn up by the city council and a first reading of the ordinance.
However, before council
