By the end of this year last year, the project had made it possible for farms to locate as much as 1800 acres of tobacco, she said.

The CPA was encouraged by the project's potential and has expanded this year to include 10 counties in the region.

In this area, hotline numbers have been established in Bath, Montgomery, Fleming, and Harrison counties.

All Nicholas County farmers, Robertson said, are welcome to use the service and are encouraged to do so.

One thing the project's results didn't anticipate was the amount of spill over usage we had in other counties. We had workers from Pendleton county call in wondering where work could be had, Robertson said.

If the project again exceeds expectations as it has done year ago, Robertson said the hotline network is ready to expand again in coming
