"If I were building another house, I would have another electric heat pump!" —Edgar Darrell Carlisle, Ky.

Edgar Darrell put a lot of thought into choosing a heating system for the house where his aunt, Lillian Hamilton, lives. "We were looking for the most efficient system," he says. "And I think electricity has the best possibilities of being the most efficient—and maybe the most available—product to use in years to come."

Aunt Lillian likes the heat pump's comfort, cleanliness and safety. "I had tank gas in the country," she says. When the heat cut off, it was a long time before the thermostat came back on, and the room got cool. The heat pump's heat is more steady. And it's very clean. It doesn't put out a lot of greasy fumes, or dust. I feel like this is a lot safer, too. It's just wonderful. I wouldn't have any other kind, now!"
