GENERAL NEWS

Children

"When we read the case history we look at short and long range goals, but questions, ask when the child was last given a physical, those kinds of questions on the impression of the child's physical health at the natural family."

"It helps the (Human Resource) review board present an objective point of view to the situation as well."

KY labor market improves in fall

Services rose by 700 jobs with jumps in educational, business and social services offsetting drops in amusement and recreation and personal services, and membership organizations.

Service jobs have increased by 5,300 jobs since last October, the biggest gain of any sector, Crutchfield said.

Transportation, communications and utilities, along with the finance, insurance and real estate sector, each added 100 jobs.

part of the community which looks from the outside in at the situation and places questions in layman's terms.

"That's not to say caseworkers do not do a great job. And I want to emphasize they work real well with and for the children, but we are a strong community link and we as advocates for the children of our community that helps not only the children, but gives caseworkers a different view of the situation as well."

"Our reviews take a couple hours each month when we meet in Nicholas County. Afterwards, we report our findings to the District Judge and he takes it from there."

"I believe this collaboration between the board, the department and the courts benefit all children in the system, and we most understand the system, the better off these children are," Hopkins said.

"All the children who originally come from Nicholas County must be placed out of county because there are no foster care homes in Carlisle or Nicholas County," Hopkins said.

"These children are served from their community. We desperately need foster care homes in this county to care for these children until they can be returned to their natural family."

The review board also examines the progress of the natural family as well.

"I want to emphasize the ultimate goal is to return the child to the natural family, and we must look at all caseworkers' findings concerning the nature and family and determine the amount of progress made," Hopkins said.

Wila Carol Hamilton's class won the candy bar sale competition put on by the Parent Teachers Association, Cherry Dale Farm, owner of the candy bar company, provided top prizes with 25 mm cameras. This was a special event as a teacher will receive a steady stream of cameras for the class including Amy Campbell, Brandon Johnson, Kevin Perkins and David Hom. According to Terri Salter, PTA president, the candy bar sale brought in over $5,000 in funds for the PTA.
