

The reserve junior champion ball at the 1993 Kentucky Angus Preview Show was held June 29, 1993, at the University of Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station in Bowling Green. Mark Richardson of Milton, Indiana, paraded the 108-kg steer.

Halsey admitted to EKU program

RICHMOND — Jim F. Halsey, a Nicholas County resident, has met an early challenge to his sheep show. Halsey's young male was accepted into Eastern Kentucky University's teacher education program.

In fact, "KERA Integration Matrix" developed by the College shows that most courses deal with aspects of KERA relate, and they can be introduced to teachers' studies. Halsey also directs the Educational Excellence Consortium headquartered at EKU.

Students are accepted into the program their junior year after meeting stringent standards. College of Education standards.

They must display above average academic ability, demonstrate proficient computer and communication skills, including satisfactory performance on the University of Kentucky writing exam, perform satisfactorily in an individual interview and receive positive recommendations from four EKU faculty members.

Eastern College of Education also met a high standard recently when it was accredited by the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE), the agency responsible for professional accreditation of teacher education programs.

When students graduate from EKU's program, they will be prepared to lead a contemporary classroom in the commonswealth, that means an atmosphere unpermeated by the Kentucky Education Reform Act (KERA). Many will return to Eastern for additional degrees and later lead reform efforts as administrators.

KERA is targeted at the elementary and secondary levels, with little said about the role of colleges and universities.

"However, higher education is committed to seeing the goals of KERA realized," said Billy Thomas, director of field services and professional development for EKU's College of Education.

"We've looked at every course we teach to see what

Heart Attacks are color blind.
When heart attacks strike, they don't discriminate by race or color — so one in sixteen of the population has a heart attack. In fact, black individuals are MORE susceptible to cardiovascular disease than white individuals.
If you or someone you know or love has a heart attack, time is critical. Every second that a heart attack goes untreated has heart tissue die. Permanently. The more tissue that dies, the greater the damage to the heart — and the less your chances for a complete recovery. Taking precious time to drive to a hospital when you are having chest pains or other symptoms of a heart attack can in fact prove to be fatal. Statistics show 1/3 of all heart attack victims will not survive — due in large part to delays in starting emergency treatment.
Your best chance for successful recovery from a heart attack is immediate emergency care.
The Emergency Room at Bourbon General is staffed 24 hours a day by highly trained professionals who know how to handle cardiac emergencies. And we're right here in Bourbon County — close to home when you need us.
For more information on Bourbon General Hospital, call 987-1065.
