MERCURY VAPOURS

By Warren B. Fisher

Reprinted from Thursday, June 5, 1980

I thought I had seen it all, that is until the bluejay that thinks he's a woodpecker lit on the trunk of a small ash tree at Lake Carnico. The crazy bird proceeded head down the trunk until he found a choice insect that suited his appetite.

It hung shown off in this manner. He flutters upward, lands sideways on the trunk and then spies a bug either in the air or on the ground, then makes a drive like a flycatcher.

This raucous sounding bird with his black crest and coat of blue may be as bas as some bird books describe him, but at least he doesn't stoop as low as the cowbird, hopefully.

A come down, sorta like you never miss the water...

"Til the well runs dry! Well we began to notice that our supply of 6-inch Ektamatic was getting low some 30 days ago and took the only steps we know to replenish same. We promptly placed an order for more. Later we had a right long, long distance eat with our supplier on May 27, they said they just didn't have any but they'd stir around and try to come up with some.

One of the gals that sets ads says she doesn't think she can set an ad the old way, it would be too much to come down.

The office wag responded with why can't you put two 3-inch rolls into he machine, that would make six. Sure would but there'd be a whale of a gap between the two.

Last week I put a three inch roll on and thought I had hidden the cassette with 6-inch paper. It's amazing what can be set on three inch paper when one's mind is put to the task. "Course we have to have the 6-inch back on the machine for cutlines unless we bend our style a little more.

And since we've bent in more than one direction thus far, maybe we can go back to an old letter press dodge - use two columns of type matter across 25 picas for the ad body in our two column ads, we used to have to do that when our last wide measure liner had been busted beyond repair.

I would have tried that trick but they found the 6-inch paper cassette.

Yep you never miss the water...

Cleared my head

What I thought was a crash of thunder didn't turn out to be!

In fact I cleared the bed, landing some three or four feet away and hastened down stairs to ask the better half what was going on. She allowed she'd heard the crash, but thankfully no one had run into the house.

Later when the better half had gone upstairs to dress for church, she called to me that she had solved the loud noise.

A large picture over the head of my bed had left its moorings and fallen straight down the wall onto the hot water baseboard radiator.

Had it tipped forward and fallen upon my head I don't believe I would have heard the crash!

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor:

I'm writing this letter to question our good city officials about their gas cut off policy. Frankly, I think it stinks! And probably that's not the only thing rotten around the office.

This past week an elderly relative of mine received a notice her gas was being cut off. She is on a very-limited income and in bad health. She had been paying on her bill and within the next couple of months would have been caught up. She had received help through the heating assistance earlier this year. But no funds were available the last time she applied.

Earlier this year the city had stated that they just couldn't go along with people who couldn't pay their bills. There is a difference between people who couldn't and wouldn't. I know there are people who make no effort and I can understand their utilities being shut off. but there are also people who do make efforts and do the best they can. What is wrong with the city going along with these people? Those who don't make an effort are usually the same people every year. The city can distinguish between the could nots and the would nots. I don't feel people who are paying on their bills deserve this kind of treatment. And I wonder how many people who haven't paid their bills and are good friends with someone did not get their gas cut off?

So you can justify your cut off policy? Can you justify spending tax dollars for all your trips? Especially trips made by city employees who take relatives along? Maybe if you cut down on some unnecessary expenses you could afford to go along with elderly citizens who are just trying to survive. I guess if she had been younger with a youngster on each hip and no husband your tax dollars could have helped her out.

Dear Editor:

To the people of Nicholas County and everyone who needs this. Listen to your heart!

Two years ago I suffered a heart attack. For two years now I have been on nine medications plus nitroglycerine and kept getting worse.

I have been in and out of the hospital several times. All EKG's were always okay. Sometimes by the time I would get to the hospital, the pain and shortness of breath would be gone. It hurt me to walk, my legs ached, my ankles swelled. I looked bloated, and blue in the face and skin.

They had told me two years ago I had three blocked arteries. Two were 70% blocked and one was 95% blocked. I stayed on my diet, low cholesterol, no sodium and never lost any weight. I couldn't stand without holding on to something. It even hurt both my arms, I would drop things, and it hurt to brush my teeth or hold my arms up to fix my hair. Sometimes you can have a heart attack and never have any pain.

May 6, I went to St. Joseph Hospital and they unclogged an artery that was 99% blocked. Today I'm doing fine, so I can get on with my life. I hope you will be as lucky as I am, so listen to your heart, it may be silently telling you something.

Thank you for reading this.

Sincerely,
Mrs. S.T. (Mary Liz) Minton

Dear Editor:

The election is over and most people are glad. All the candidates had some good ideas and they are good people.

I appreciate all the people who voted for me. This shows a great deal of confidence and respect. I think all the candidates can be proud. When a number of people vote for you this shows that we all have some friends. I extend my best wishes to the people who won and lost.

To reflect on all of this I make these comments. What does this reflect in the scheme of time and things? Life will go on and we will continue to work and solve the daily problems. A few years will go by and it will be done over again.

All any of us can do is just our very best.

Sincerely yours,
Allen Clay Stone

Dear Editor:

Now that the primary election is over and we have several new people aspiring for the Office of Sheriff in November, I feel it would be an appropriate time to make everyone aware of the Code of Ethics for the Office of the Sheriff.

Sheriff Charles Logsdon, Hardin County and President of the Kentucky Sheriffs' Association and I, were on the National, Sheriffs' Association's committee which wrote the current Code of Ethics. This Code of Ethics has been adopted by the National Sheriffs' Association and the Kentucky Sheriffs' Association and is used nationwide as the standard for acceptable conduct by sheriffs.

The Code of Ethics of The Office of the Sheriff is as follows:

I SHALL ENSURE that I and my employees in the performance of our duties, will enforce and administer the law according to the standards of the U.S. Constitution and applicable State Constitutions and statutes so that equal protection of the law is guaranteed to everyone. To that end I shall not permit personal opinions, party affiliations, or consideration of the status of others to alter or lessen this standard of treatment of others.

I SHALL ESTABLISH, PROMULGATE AND ENFORCE a set of standards of

NCHS graduate given scholarship

Charles Moore, son of Mr. and Mrs. Swangu Moore, Route 2, Carlisle, Kentucky, was notified this week by Dr. D. V. Terrell, Dean of the College of Engineering of the University of Kentucky, that he had been selected to receive one of the Kentucky Highway Engineering Scholarships. He was selected on the basis of the score he made (especially in mathematics) on a scholarship test given by the University.

Charles will be employed by the Highway Department during the summer and will enter the College of Engineering this fall to study civil engineering.

He is the third member of this year's graduating class to receive a college scholarship. The other two are Donnie Hillock to Eastern State College, Richmond, Kentucky and Ned Jennings to the University of Kentucky, Lexington, Kentucky.

While in high school Charles was a hard worker and as a result of his study he made outstanding records. He was selected the best student in Mathematics and history, and was salutorian of the graduating class. Mrs. Louise Linville and Miss Ethel Butts were his Mathematics teachers while in high school.

Donnie Lynam, a member of last year's class received a similar scholarship and has just completed a successful year in the College of Engineering at the University of Kentucky. He will be employed by the Highway Department this summer as a member of a surveying crew and will work out of Morehead, Kentucky.

There's No Remote Control with this Newspaper
59% of Kentucky households recently made a purchase as a result of newspaper advertising, compared to 27% who made purchases from a TV commercial.*
Zap!!
Newspaper advertising doesn't work that way. It's there when newspaper readers are ready. They don't have to run to the refrigerator. But if they do, they can take the newspaper with them. Ever try that with a TV set?
And newspaper advertising stays around. It's not on for 15 seconds and then gone. It's there for days. In fact, the same survey shows that up to 73 percent* of Kentucky newspaper readers keep the newspaper around the house for at least three days.
So while newspaper readers might go to the refrigerator, your message is there when they return. And it stays there, working for you.
Newspaper advertising - - it doesn't stop with the flick of a button.

KHC making funds available

Kentucky Housing Corporation announced today that it will make available $10 million for programs to address housing needs for special population groups. The KHC Assisted Living Pilot Program will award low-rate financing to applicants for the purpose of development, construction / renovation and day-to-day operation of an assisted living facility.

These facilities will serve populations such as the elderly, those with physical and mental disabilities, single-parent heads of household and other similar low-income groups who have special housing and service needs.

"It is the philosophy of this project that a person's need for care to be balanced against choice, dignity, belonging and individuality," sated KHC's Director of Assisted Living Sue Tuttle. "Our goal is to assist low-income special needs individuals with their housing options, so that they can become productive members of society and lead normal, happy lives while having access to safe, affordable housing.
