Babbage discusses voter registration

Voter registration books are now in the Nicholas County Clerk's office, Secretary of State Bob Babbage announced.

Citizens may register in the county clerk's office from now through October 4, Babbage said.

Kentucky law requires the registration books to be closed four weeks before and one week after an election. This year's general election will be held on November 2.

"Voter registration trends in Kentucky are being reserved," Babbage said.

In the period between the 1988 general election and the 1989 primary election, registration dropped by 89,229. In the same period between the 1992 general election and the 1993 primary, registration increased by 83,929. Every county except Fayette and Madison recorded increased registration following the 1992 presidential election.

Babbage said he was hopeful that Kentucky would set another record for registration this year. Between the 1991 general election and the 1992 general election 184,301 Kentuckians registered to vote for the first time. This set a record for the most registration in a single year.

In 1993 another record was set in Kentucky when 2,1650,192 were registered to vote.

"With the interest in local races and the renewed interest in participating in the democratic processes, it is likely we will see another registration record by the end of this year," Babbage said.
