Foundation discusses by-laws, sets next meeting

By Heather Melton Harris OF THE CARLISLE MERCURY Staff
CARLISLE - The Nicholas County Public Education Foundation met on August 31 and primarily worked on the by-laws for the foundation.

The members are organized into an class. The Distinguished Partner class was changed to include those who donated an annual amount of $1,000 to $2,000...

"I think we will see better participation and better attendance if we hold the meeting around the time of Memorial Day weekend, people think of school when school is in session..."

Although directors voted to accept the final wording for the by-laws, Martha Sue Taylor, non-voting education representative and director, said foundation attorney, Dawn Letaker, would look over them thoroughly and make sure they are correct in legal terms.

The board of directors will be elected at the May meeting, but contributions in honorarium or memoriam are welcome at any time. Any contributions or dues paid annually are tax deductible.

"We are planning for students to spend time in the business, working in the same situations as doctors, lawyers, dentists, area businesses and etc. Children would actively take part in the workplace..."
