Wrecked Nissan tours with Kentucky State Police

A wrecked Nissan car illustrating the benefits of safety restraints will be touring the state courtesy of Nissan and the Kentucky State Police.

The NX 2000 coupe was totaled in the one-vehicle crash that occurred in the Richmond Post area. Air bags and a safety belt saved the driver of the car, the lone occupant. "This vehicle will be on display at fairs, high schools and or use by civic groups in an effort to emphasize the use of safety restraints" said Capt. Rodney Brewer, commander of the Kentucky State Police Public Affairs Branch. "The fact that the driver of this severely damaged vehicle came out alive is a testimony to the effectiveness of safety belts and air bags."

site-based council member, said.

"And plus, high school students only have to have three high school math credits, by the time they go to take the ACT or college entrance exams, they are not prepared in the math area because they have not had any math in two years, this way they are prepared because the credits are kept in the high school."

Reid also reported to the council on security measures being taken during football games.

"I got a call from the city and they apparently can't afford to pay the overtime for city police during football games," Reid said. "So we need to pay $26.50 per policeman (total of two) and we already pay $20 apiece for two emergency personnel. We really do need the policeman for security reasons and the emergency personnel just in case a situation would arise, either on the field or off."

Smoot said the schools also had a great need for police when school lets out for the day.

"I know they are there when the buses let out, but afterward students who drive to school are leaving and there are also many who walk," Smoot said.

"With all these people pulling out, some shooting over to Chevron" or Dairy Queen for something to drink, others walking to the some places and back to school for extracurricular activities, it's a mess.

"I know we can't get a stoplight until there are X amount of accidents, but it would be a terrible, terrible tragedy if an accident resulted in death."

"I would like to see the buses go out the bus entrance," Reid said.

"The speed bumps the board put in have helped slow down traffic, and we really appreciate the effort the board has made to help with the traffic problem."

The council decided to gather more information on the possibility of a stoplight or having city police direct after school traffic.

A motion was made and passed to send a letter of appreciation to the Nicholas County School Board for installing speed bumps.

The council also approved Nicholas County Youth Football the use of the football field when it was not in use by the high school football team or band. The council sent the request to the board for its final approval.

The council also sent the board a request, for its approval, for the purchase of two new band instruments.

The purchase of replacement uniforms for the cheerleaders was also approved.

Reid also reported on the progress made toward getting a new track.

The council decided to make the recommendation to the board stating the new track need to be regulation 440 size.

"Track team members need to practice on the same size they will compete on. When they go to other schools they don't know where to stop and start, you always know the Nicholas County kid at a track meet because they are the one still running," Jim Simons, council member, said.

The council approved a request from the Special Education Department to participate in the Special Olympics Area 8 competition in bowling, rollerskating and basketball.

Upon reopening the meeting after an executive session entered into in order to discuss student disciplinary actions, Simons brought up the need to work with the elementary's site-based council.

The council decided to have a joint meeting with the elementary's council at a future date in order to set goals for the future, and as Simons put it, "to work together for change."

Mathers Health Care, met with city representatives Monday afternoon, and pledged to work with the city on the sewer problem.

"The cheapest solution to the problem is for the school, the hospital, and Jockey to bag their food waste," Kelley said. "We could then haul the waste away and bury it."

Don Haney of Jockey asked Kelley how levels of BOD waste is determined.

"To determine who is producing the most BOD, we test at manholes that lead off certain sites," Kelley said. "For Jockey, we test at the manhole between the two mills, the hospital is tested behind Dr. Villaflor's office, and the schools are tested in front of the superintendent's office."

Haney said Jockey does not produce enough BOD waste to seriously affect levels in the system.

"We don't have garbage disposals, we have grease traps and special containers to dump grease from deep fryers and so forth into," said Haney. "We are in compliance with all federal and state BOD regulations. We have heard nothing about this problem since we began operating in 1964. Why is this suddenly a problem?"

"BOD has been a problem for about two years

Kelley explained the reason for the meeting was to find a voluntary solution, rather than resorting to adopting a sewer use ordinance.

"The state an federal environmental agencies are on the city to adopt a sewer ordinance," Kelley said. "I didn't come up with this idea myself. It's something we have to do."

Guthrie asked what needed to be done to lower BOD.

"If we remove all food waste, will BOD levels drop to acceptable ranges?" asked Guthrie. "Or is there something else we have to do?"

Kelley said he could not guarantee levels of BOD would drop to acceptable state parameters.

"There is no way I can promise removing all food waste, but it will undoubtedly help," said Kelley.

Guthrie said more specifics are needed for him to present the problem to Nicholas County School Board.

"If you (Mr. Kelley) could draft a letter stating the problem and suggest some solutions, I can present it to the board," Guthrie said. "I'm sure the board will do everything possible to work this problem out."

Haney offered other solutions to the BOD problem. "More flow is one way to solve the problem," Haney said. "We could let you have 300,000 gallons of water a month to increase the flow in the system."

Kelley said waste from Jockey is to high in sodium chloride, or salt, and copper to introduce into city sewers.

Haney said he would like to form a partnership with the city to solve the BOD problem.

"We'd like to be notified when the city is doing tests, rather than having them sneak in to do it," Haney said.

Kelley told Haney the city would notify Jockey of testing, but workers did not sneak and do tests as Haney claimed.

"We have an easement through where the manholes is," Kelley said. "If you read yours, you'll see that. We didn't sneak anywhere."

Council agreed to contact GRW Engineers to further study the BOD problem, and to offer some further solutions.

No formal date was announced for the aforementioned meeting.
