Ladies discover the joy (and difficulty) of golf at Carnico

By Leigh Stone
 Of The Carriage Mercury Staff
 CARLSLE: The "twice" the "one" enthusiastic golf student declared.
 "The ability to hit the ball is good, too."
 The women "would be" golfers participating in the Lake Carnico Ladies Clinic got lots of advice and encouragement from PGA (Professional Golf Association) member and Lake Carnico Golf Course Co-Owner Steve Renaker of Columbus.
 "If it feels natural, you're probably doing it wrong," Renaker remarked about the proper placement of one's fingers while gripping a golf club.
 "If you learn one thing tonight, I want you to learn how to swing the ball properly. Hitting the ball is real good, but I want you to learn how to swing."
 A sudden storm the evening of Monday, July 25, didn't deter the ladies from wanting to learn golf's finer points.
 Various reasons were given for wanting to learn the game.

"My husband is not going to retire and leave me at home. I'm going to learn how to do this," one enthusiastic golf student declared.
 Others said they wanted the exercise.
 The ladies clinic is being held as Renaker's schedule permits, usually each Monday night. The course hosted its first ladies golf scramble Monday, Aug. 1. Winners were Minnie Bruce Cough, Karen Banta, Jean Brett, Mary Jo McCord and Donna Howard.
 Besides Renaker, Lake Carnico Co-Owner Wendy Loffer and Lake Carnico employees Karen Banta and Wally Anderson look some tips. Andy Anderson, another course employee, assisted Renaker.
 Everyone gathered at 6 p.m. in the downstairs pro shop area. As the storm let up, Renaker distributed golf clubs. Everyone who promised not to smoke at the former banquet room was given a complimentary practice grip.

Those venturing upstairs included Louise Zachary, Karen Banta, Jan Howard, Danna Boone, Jan Evely, Marjorie Wilson, Mary Jo McCord, Wendy Anderson, Andy Anderson and Wendy Loffer.
 The mother-daughter duo were Jan Howard, daughter of Mamie Rose, and Donna Howard, daughter of Mary Jo McCord.
 Eight golf carts were parked in a neat row to one side of the huge formerly luxurious room. The ceiling had chandeliers and light fixtures dropping. The Marjorie was addressed by Renaker, "No pictures please!"
 The ladies took their places, a few paces apart, feet a shoulder distance apart, the club tips pressed into their fingers at times by Renaker. All the ladies were right handed.
 "I got to tell you, this feels awful," Wendy said checking the position of her fingers on the club.

"What do you say, Dana?" Renaker asked.
 "But my fingers aren't long enough."
 One, two, three, swing! commanded Renaker.
 "I don't care if you tear up the carpet," Wendy calmed participants.
 "The view of U.S. 68 and the 'more than 70 acre' course was breathtaking through the large windows."
 Several commented about the good times they'd had when the banquet room was open.
 "We hope to reopen it someday," Renaker assured.

"I'm not really tired. Walking back up this hill is going to be the hardest thing," claimed one new student.
 "But we'll have the carts when we really play the game," reminded another.
 "Maybe we can do this next week," Renaker said.

"Let's definitely do this next week," a student replied.
 Wendy added, "Let's start a scramble."
 They did.
 These ladies have discovered the green and they like it. To join the clinic, call Wendy Loffer at 289-7628.

Golf more than just yelling "Fore!" and hitting the ball
 After 30 minutes of proper stance, swinging, and making sure one's weight was on the left foot as the club comes up, prompted everyone's courage. Renaker led everyone back downstairs and out to the course.
 The women divided into two groups, each practicing putting and meeting new distances. As they progressed, Renaker said the pro shop had equipment available for those getting really serious about golf.
 As they practiced making the white ball skip across the green, the teacher provided encouragement.
 "That's good, Jan."
 "Good Mary Jo."
 "Donna, much better."
 "Keep your head in there!" Renaker advised another.
 Renaker didn't resist praising his students. "I've been teaching 17 years and you've had the best class of students I've had."
 His students forgave his cliché and accepted the complimentary verbal punch and "laughed." He's going to come from Columbus, he has to make it good."
 By 7:30, the ladies were doing shoulder rotations. Each complex had that ray glow that comes from fresh air and exercise.
 "It's relaxing," said Jan Howard.
 "It's really good exercise," said Danna Boone.

School entry requires proof of shots, exams
 FRANKFORT, Kentucky (July 28, 1994)—As parents prepare their children for the coming school year, health officials are reminding them to include up-to-date immunization certificates and medical exams on their check lists.
 School entry is the first opportunity Kentucky officials have to make sure that children have shots required by law. But children should have had most of the shots before their second birthday.
 "Parents should remember that school needs the certificates at first school entry, but children need most of these shots while they are still toddlers," said Clarkson Palmer, M.D., communicable disease branch manager in the Department for Health Services.
 Kentucky state law requires students entering school for the first time, including pre-school, to have had immunizations against diphtheria, tetanus, polio, measles and rabies. Upon enrolling their children in school, parents must present a certificate confirming the shots.
 First-time students entering primary grades and up must also present a certificate proving that they have had a tuberculosis test within one year prior to enrollment.
 Incoming sixth graders must have had two measles/influenza shots and a physical examination.
 Parents needing shots, TB skin tests or physical exams for their children should contact their private physician or the health department in their community. These health professionals can also provide parents with the certificates necessary for school enrollment.

Temporary

 I think I would be a high school teacher, but I'm realistic at the same time. With the future of tobacco I don't know how we can afford a new school."
 Elder and Willis met the 4 P.M. 7:24 deadline to be on the Nov. 8 ballot, according to Fryer.
 Former school board member David Simons of Cassidy Creek represented District 4 and persons wanting to fill his spot also reside in that district, said William Birdwell on Monday. Birdwell, former superintendent of Bourbon County Schools, is in charge of school board re-naming committees throughout Kentucky.
 The interviews for the temporary board position were scheduled to take place at the Nicholas County Central School Office Wednesday morning, Birdwell said.
 Birdwell will supervise the interviews but will not be a voting member. He disqualified himself because he owns property at Lake Carnico.

None of the board members serving committee members are Nicholas County residents, Birdwell confirmed. The serving committee was to include John Hutchings of Leadership, Ky., Karen Osborne of the Bourbon County Board of Education and Anne Mason of the Scott County Board of Education.
 Usually, a decision is made within 10 days. Then, the person selected is notified.
