Without question the last week is more than it should have been. I don't like the cold to begin with and this last week of minus number 1 have been a grueling, complaining, yelling wind...

It has to be one of the most frustrating things in the world to see your tracks being covered by snow. Then there's those National Guardsmen, DES personnel and fire department members who have made rain to impossible areas to save lives and deliver essential services.

For the ambulances motoring along in this weather those folks often have impossible tasks just to get to patients, not to mention trying to get to the hospitals of the area.

Also on the list of those working long hours with little recognition are the water employees and utility workers who face outer exposure and lead after lead.

It's not easy to wait when an emergency situation is at hand for anyone. But when circumstances dictate only non-urgent, waiting is only part of the game and everyone should play.

There are many others who have to function in terrible weather. Many have to do their jobs, many have to take care of emergencies within their own family, and many simply have to make enough to survive.

There is one thing for certain: bad weather creates the need for joining together. It can be us using pipes, wires, snow, ice, and shovels to get to work, or it can be us helping to get a stranded motorist out of the snowbank.

A feeling of accomplishment and helplessness comes through - and is evident to all. Thanks to those who've been through this all, and to anyone I may have failed to mention.

And so, for another week, thanks and thirty.
