Church members travel to Central America

CARLISLE: Two members of Carlisle Assembly of God Church took an one-day trip to the country of Ecuador, South America. Pastor Darrell Sexton and Youth Leader Tim Proffitt took the trip as a missionary endeavor, visiting with the people and helping build a church.

With a heater in Nashville, Tenn., and Miami, Fla., they were finally on their way to Ecuador in Spanish. Not many people speak English. However, the Assemblies of God missionaries were able to help them communicate. The people as a whole are warm and friendly. Most of them don't have cars, but the cities are flooded with buses and taxis.

"The driving down there was like getting aboard an amusement park ride," said Brother Sexton. "They drive anywhere they want to. The first one to an intersection blows the horn and goes on through. We didn't see any accidents, however. The missionaries have told us there is a debate over which is more important, the horn or the brakes."

Both men brought back some $100 bills. The only bad part is that they are only worth about five cents in American currency. The weather was hot, as Ecuador straddles the equator, but the two didn't seem to mind. The people there are anxiously awaiting a new church building in Curuma, which the KY team went to help build.

There is such poverty in Ecuador and there is a spiritual vacuum that Jesus is beginning to fill," Brother Sexton commented.

The church the missionaries visited has grown from zero to more than 100 faithful members in only five years. In Carlisle, six new churches have been

Church Corner

The following is an article written by a local church official, and does not necessarily reflect the views or opinions held by The Carlisle Mercury or Park Communications, Inc.

By Dr. B. Kent Duke Minister, First Christian Church Judas Iscariot, the man who was one of The Twelve, went away to the chief priests to betray Jesus. He was a Jew who loved his offer, they were delighted, and they promised to give him money. So he began to search for a convenient method of betraying Him.

It was with consummate artistry that Mark sets aside by the awaiting at Bethany and the betrayal by Judas. Without comment Mark sets aside by the act of generous love, and the act of terrible treachery.

There is always a shadow of the heart as we think of Judas. He sets him with the lowest of all hills, which is a hell of cold and ice, a hell designed for those who were not not sinners swept away by angry passions, but who were cold, calculating, deliberate sinners against the love of God.

Mark tells the story with such economy of words that the leaves us no material for speculation. But at the back of Judas' action we can distinguish certain things.

There was covetousness. Matthew 26:15 actually tells us that Judas went to the authorities and asked what price they were offering. John 11:27 drops a hint. That verse tells us that Judas had asked for information as to where Jesus could be found that they might arrest Him. It may well be that this little device was to let the authorities know where to find Jesus with a price upon His head, and that Judas knew it, and wished to acquire the offered reward. John is quite definite about it. He tells us that Judas was the treasurer of the apostolic band and used his position to pilfer from the common purse (John 12:6).

The desire for money can be a terrible thing. It can make a man blind to decency and honesty and honor. It can make him careless how he gets to his goals. Judas discovered too late that some things cost too much. Undoubtedly there must have been jealousy. Klipstock, the German poet, thought that Judas, when he joined The Twelve, hid every gift and every virtue which might make him so terrible. At that he had to be consumed with jealousy of John, the beloved disciple, and that this jealousy drove him to his terrible act. It is easy to see that there were tensions in The Twelve. The rest were able to overcome them, and it may well be that Judas was the one man who had an uncontrollable and uncontrollable demon of jealousy within his heart. There are few things which can wreck life for ourselves and for others as jealousy can.

Banta, Livingood wed

The marriage of Miss Crist Anne Banta, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Allen Banta of Carlisle and Roy Brian Livingood, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy A. Livingood of Moreheadville was solemnized March 22 at 2:00 p.m. at the Least Green Baptist Church.

Rev. H.G. Pratt officiated the double ring ceremony and sang "The Lord's Prayer" during the ceremony. Mrs. Janie Livingood, pianist, provided the musical music.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a flower length gown accented with bead and pearl clusters and long tapered sleeves. The fingertip veil was accented with pearls and held in place by a headband of beads and pearls. She carried a bouquet of white, teal and rose carnations and matching ribbons.

The maid of honor was Dana Banta, sister of the bride, who wore a rose and teal floral dress. She carried a bouquet of white and rose carnations.

Luther T. Livingood, cousin of the groom served as best man. Ushers were Jason Minton, cousin of the bride, and Brad Lenox.

The guest book was kept by Bridgett Sexton. A reception following was held at the church. Those serving were

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH CARLISLE, KENTUCKY

Something Old, 1-624-3979

Something New, 1(606)624-3979

There's something new to remember. From now on, when you make long distance calls to telephone numbers within Kentucky's 606 area code, dial 0 or 1 + 606 and then the number you're calling.

The nation's continued telecommunications growth has created a shortage of telephone numbers. By dialing the appropriate area code on all long distance calls, numbers are freed up for new business and residential customers.

If you have long distance numbers within the 606 area code on any programmed services or equipment like Speed Calling, Call Forwarding, modems, or even a FAX machine, now's the time to reprogram them. Effective April 2, 1994, dialing the area code will be necessary to complete long distance calls to telephone numbers within the 606 area.
