Dr. Carl Rosen talks about... Prostate Cancer

(Part 1 of 3) QUESTION: What is the prostate gland and why does it cause men so much trouble?

ANSWER: The prostate provides the fluid component of semen in which sperm travel. It causes trouble in older men because it surrounds the urethra, which also carries urine. If the prostate enlarges, it can choke off the urethra, which can make urination difficult or sometimes impossible.

Q: The American Cancer Society says men over 40 should have annual prostate screenings as part of their overall physical exam, or when certain symptoms appear.

A: The classic symptoms of prostate trouble are weak or interrupted urine flow; inability to urinate, or difficulty starting or stopping urination; the need to urinate frequently, especially at night; blood in the urine; painful or burning urination; and continuing pain in the lower back, pelvis or upper thighs.

Q: Should I see a doctor if I have only one of these symptoms? A: Yes. The presence of any of these symptoms means you need a checkup.

Q: Do these symptoms mean I have prostate cancer or will develop it? A: Not necessarily. Other prostate conditions also present these symptoms. A doctor needs to make that judgment.

Q: Does pain mean it might be cancer? A: The two don't necessarily go together in cancer's early stages.

Q: What procedures do you perform? A: We start with the digital rectal exam and the PSA test. PSA stands for Prostate-Specific Antigen, compounds produced by the prostate. If your PSA levels are elevated, that's a sign that we need to check further.

Q: Why the digital exam? A: The prostate is located near the rectum, so it can be touched and directly checked. Feeling the prostate gives the doctor some valuable information.

Q: What is the doctor looking for during the digital exam? A: Hardness, swelling, or nodules on the prostate. That exam along with the PSA yields an important first picture.

Q: Suppose my digital exam and PSA lab results make you suspect I might have a prostate condition. Do we go immediately to surgery? A: No. The next test is the trans-rectal ultrasound. We can also take a biopsy—a sample of the prostate's tissue—to test for more information on possible cancerous conditions.

Q: Suppose those tests are suspicious too. Now what?

COMMUNITY

Church Corner

By R. Kent Duke. Pastor, First Christian Church. DON'T GIVE YOUR CHILD EVERYTHING HE WANTS. In a society that is oriented to material wealth, our children quickly learn to "want things."

Our children will quickly become cynical and learn how to manipulate our vulnerability to get exactly what they want. And don't think that teenagers are the only group that learn this skill. Haven't you watched a clever four year old talk his mother into a toy or a candy bar at the supermarket checkout because she feels guilty about something?

Our high school parking lot is filled with shiny late model cars—Saabs and BMWs. These cars do not belong to the teachers; they belong to the students. I suspect that many of them represent "youthful" kids.

I work very hard not to fall into the trap of giving my children everything they want, but for me personally, this area of parenting is the most difficult. I hate to say no to my children when they ask for something, particularly if I have the resources to pay for it. But experience and common sense tell me I'm making a big mistake when I do.

Each family must evaluate where they draw the line with regard to indulging their children's material wants. Children are masters at "conscious consumption," and we must take care we do not fall into the trap of creating "materialistic monsters."

Material possessions are not the only area in which parents give children whatever they want. We do the same thing when we let them have their own way, when we never discipline or correct our children. The most challenging child for a teacher to deal with is one whose parent has never said "no."

I can almost predict, when I hand out a discipline notice to a certain group of children, that the telephone will be ringing about 2:15. Johnny's mother uses the phone to tell me that Johnny didn't do it. I can hear Johnny whining in the background as he protests his innocence to his mother. In those cases, Johnny, his mother, the principal, and the person who caught Johnny in the act will gather in the principal's office. Johnny's mother is usually shocked and dismayed to find out that Johnny has lied. She is embarrassed, annoyed, and I can't understand how this could have happened. The answer is simple. She never said "no" to Johnny.

Childhood Asthma Management

"Almost all asthma patients can become free of symptoms with proper treatment. Patients and their families should expect nothing less."

This is a common and true statement made by many well respected asthma patients. At Johnson Matthers Health Care, the Respiratory Therapist is introducing the Childhood Asthma Management Program (CAMP). This program was developed to meet the asthma education needs of children ages 4-14 and their families. The program is free of charge.

The Respiratory Department of Johnson Matthers Health Care takes very seriously their commitment to provide information to asthma patients and their families on how they can monitor, treat, prevent, and manage their asthma at home so they may enjoy fewer alterations of their life-style and fewer trips to the hospital," said Steven Hirschberg, Registered Respiratory Therapist and director of the CAMP IHMC program.

"Prevention of an asthma event" is what CAMP is all about. It gives the patient and their family a great deal of information in conjunction with regular contact with their physician. It also provides asthma sufferers and their family a useful and comprehensive program designed to meet their individual needs." Hirschberg said CAMP is a one to two hour program the asthma patient attend with their family. The respiratory therapist will collect information on the patient's asthma history and shares with them a video and booklet presentation on managing childhood asthma. A question and answer period follows. During this session, the Respiratory Therapist will discuss a multitude of topics regarding asthma so that a program tailored to their individual needs can be developed. The topics to be discussed are as follows:

- O How to expect from asthma treatments
O How asthma can be controlled
O Learning how asthma is triggered
O Medicines used in controlling asthma
O How to use asthma medication and equipment
O Monitoring asthma and measuring the effect of medication
O Responding to symptoms
O Creating an asthma treatment plan with your doctor
O Questions on when a visit to your doctor or the emergency room is necessary

If you are interested, please contact Steven Hirschberg at 200-7181 Extension 134, for more information and an appointment at Johnson Matthers Health Care.
