Dear Diane

DEAR DIANE: I am 17 and I got my license a year ago. I am a good driver and have proven how responsible I can be with the family car. In fact, my parents have praised me on numerous occasions for my good sense and maturity concerning this. A friend of mine just got a new motorcycle. I've ridden it and I absolutely love it. It's so much better than a car. I've asked my parents if I can buy one, but they said no way and they won't even consider it. This is totally unfair. After all, I work after school and am willing to buy this with my own money, as well as pay for the insurance. I don't see what the big deal is. My parents claim it's unsafe, but as I said before, I've proven myself already with the car. They should realize I'm not going to do anything crazy or take unnecessary risks. If I can have a motorcycle, I know I'll ride safely, helmet and all. I just can't seem to convince them. Do you think I should just buy it and surprise them? After all, once it's a done deal, they really won't be in much of a position to prevent.
