Dear Diane: I am 24 and have been happily married for the past four years. My husband is a wonderful man and we're both looking forward to starting a family soon. Recently, we bought our first house which is a dream come true for both of us. My problem is, I ran into my first boss from a while back and it stirred up all these old feelings. I had thought he moved far away, but he's back now and when we meet, sparks fly between us. He tried to meet me for lunch some time, but we far, I've said so. I'm too afraid I'll be tempted to do something I shouldn't. I'm a confused. Why should I have such feelings when I know I'm in love with my husband and we have such a good life? It is possible to be in love with two people at the same time? I think so as if the years never happened when we met. Please help. I don't know what to do or why this is happening.
