"Had it not been for Nicholas County Hospital and Ambulance Service, I wouldn't be alive to tell this story..."

Jan Fryman was out in her barn gathering horse coats and brushes from a metal cabinet when a small red wasp flew out and stung her between the eyes. She had been stung by wasps before and never had a reaction, so she thought nothing of it. Moments later, however, she fainted twice and was having difficulty breathing.

"One moment I was dusting one of my horses in the stable. The next thing I remember was waking up in a bed at Nicholas County Hospital with no idea of how I got there."
That was when she found out that a simple wasp sting had made her lose consciousness. Her husband, who helped her to her house, noticed that her lips were black and quickly called 911.
Within minutes, she was in a Nicholas County ambulance and while it speeded toward the hospital, EMTs Stephanie Ring and Bobbie Kelley forced an airway into her mouth. She had stopped breathing on her own. Within a few minutes they arrived at the Nicholas County Hospital emergency room where immediate medical treatment restored her breathing - and her life.
"I'm just thankful for the ambulance service, Dr. Lopez, and Carla Robinson, RN, at Nicholas County Hospital. If I had been forced to travel outside this county for medical help, I wouldn't have survived."

Carpenier bees cause structural damage

If you haven't noticed black bees hovering around the eaves, decks and wood siding of your home, you will shortly. These are probably carpenier bees searching for mates and nesting sites. Carpenier bees cause cosmetic and structural damage to wood. They can be quite intimidating to homeowners and have the potential to inflict painful stings. Male carpenier bees, often aggressive, hovering in front of people who are around the nests. The males are harmless since they lack stingers, and while female carpenier bees can inflict a painful sting, they seldom will unless harassed or molested. The best time to control carpenier bees before the tunnels are fully constructed. Liquid sprays of carbaryl (sevin), cyfluthrin (dursban) or a synthetic pyrethroid (permethrin, cyfluthrin, lambda cyhalothrin, etc.) can be applied to wood surfaces extending large numbers of bees.

Residual effectiveness of most sprayable formulations sold to homeowners is only about seven to 10 days, so the treatment may need to be repeated. Tunnels that already have been excavated were best treated by puffing insecticidal dust such as carbaryl, lindane or d-phenothrin into the nest opening. Aerial sprays sold for wasp or hornet control also are effective, but less provisioning their nests will sting. Treatment is best performed at night or while wearing protective clothing. Leave the hole open for a few days after treatment to allow the bees to contact and distribute the insecticide throughout the nest galleries. Then plug the entrance hole with a piece of wooden dunnit coated with carpenter glue or wood putty. This will protect against future use of the old nesting tunnels, as well as moisture intrusion and wood decay.

Heat.....

standers can help lower the heat index by wearing light-colored, loose-fitting clothing. When the heat index is above 90, wearing a hat and sunglasses can help. Wearing a hat and sunglasses can help. Wearing a hat and sunglasses can help. Wearing a hat and sunglasses can help.
