As the weather gets warmer (and gets warmer, too!), all of our insect friends begin making their annual appearance. Among the most common problem-causing species are ants, those industrious little creatures which mesmerized us all as children.

Ants are frequent and persistent pests which cause annoyance, contaminate food and sometimes cause structural damage. Ants nesting both indoors and outdoors can be controlled and eliminated through careful work and often with minimal use of pesticides.

Indoor ant control is more difficult because the nests are usually hidden or in hard-to-reach places. Killing the ants seen is ineffective because the immature ants and the egg-laying members of the ant colony do not leave the nest. Unless the entire colony is eliminated, the problem will continue.

Typical indoor locations for nests include spaces behind walls, cabinets and window frames, and under floors. Nests can be found by tracing ant movements after placing them dabs of maple syrup or honey ant bait in hollow areas, such as behind walls and under cabinets, can be killed by injecting borax and insecticidal dust into the area. Borax also can be sprinkled on the nest. The hole in the wall or floor can be drilled through which the insecticide or Borax can be injected.

Some ants seen indoors may actually have outdoor nests. If they are followed to find their entering points, it can be determined if their nests are outdoors. Outdoor nests are marked in the ground by mounds of soil or debris, and can be difficult to locate. To eliminate these outdoor colonies, thoroughly spray the nest with an insecticide labeled for outdoor use, such as carbaryl or cyfluthrin. Always follow all label directions for use of these products to obtain the best and safest results. Broad-spectrum pesticide treatment for an entire yard is not necessary, and will reduce the number of beneficial ants preying on other harmful pests in the lawn and garden.

Once you have the problem eliminated, you'll want to take precautions to make sure it doesn't come up again. One sure-fire way to do so is to plant mint around the foundation of your home. Spearmint, peppermint or any other mint variety will keep ants away forever.

Rev. and Mrs. Robert Allen

Goodbye..... and will miss the people of Nicholas County Church members, Pauline, Barbara and Paula. Sunday prepared a fried chicken dinner for Rev. Allen and his wife on moving day. Allen began holding street meetings in his hometown of Manchester, Ohio in 1946. The reverend took a home course and pastored at his first church in 1950. He is an ordained elder with the Church of the Nazarene, but considers himself an independent, non-denominational preacher. He has served in many churches throughout the eastern United States including, Indiana, Ohio, Virginia, North Carolina, Alabama, and Mississippi.

Rev. Allen and Mrs. Allen have two sons, David Eugene Allen of Manchester, Ohio and Roger Allen of Proctorville, Ohio. The couple also have four grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. They will celebrate their 55th anniversary on December 24 of this year. Rev. and Mrs. Allen invite any Nicholas Countyans living in the Mt. Vernon area to join them for services at the Mt. Vernon Church of the Nazarene.

Rev. Robert Allen says goodbye to Saltwell and Rose Hill

Reverend Robert Allen has preached his last sermon for the Saltwell and Rose Hill United Methodist Churches. Allen is moving on to Mt. Vernon where Rev. Allen will preach at the Mt. Vernon Church of the Nazarene in the Eastern Kentucky district. For past three years, Rev. Allen has pastored in the combined membership of the two churches here in Nicholas County. Allen says he has enjoyed the time he has spent here.
