The Season to hunt safely
During Kentucky's hunting season last year, nine hunting-related accidents were reported, one that was fatal. This is a 50 percent increase over the six accidents reported in 1994, and nine accidents too many. Every one of these accidents could have been prevented had the hunters exercised more caution in the field.

All hunters need to know and follow the ten commandments of hunting safety each time they hunt. Using the following rules with common sense will reduce the chances of a hunting accident:

- 1) Treat every gun with the respect due a loaded gun. This is the cardinal rule of safety.
- 2) Carry only empty guns, open and with the action up, into your automobile, camp and home.
- 3) Always be sure that the barrel and action of the gun are clear of obstructions.
- 4) Always carry your gun so that you can control the direction of the muzzle if you stumble.
- 5) Identify your target before you pull the trigger.
- 6) Never point a gun at anything you do not intend to shoot.
- 7) Never leave your gun unattended unless you unload it first.
- 8) Never climb a tree or fence with a loaded gun.
- 9) Do not shoot at a flat, hard surface or at the surface of water — the bullet may ricochet.
- 10) Do not mix gunpowder and alcohol.

Kentucky Teens reach fourth in 4-H contest

Under the supervision of two Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources (KDFWR) biologists, four Kentucky teenagers captured fourth place at the National 4-H Wildlife Evaluation Invitational Contest, held Aug. 10-14, at the Aldo Fro Baptist Encampment, near Leakey, Texas.

Couched by KDFWR wildlife biologists Tom Edwards and Marcus Schroeder, the Kentucky team were the best rural management plan in the competition. Shi Breen, Rachel Estes, Jonathon Smith and Michael Smith made up Kentucky's team. This year's event was very competitive with less than 10 points separating the top five.

The invitational is the culmination of a year's effort by local 4-H members who have studied hard, completed and won local and state contests prior to participating at the national invitational.

The wildlife habitat evaluation program, a part of USDA's Cooperative States Research, Education and Extension Service, is designed to help participants develop leadership skills while learning about wildlife conservation principles and practices. In the program, youth learn to recognize wildlife habitat from aerial photographs, identify important wildlife foods and the wildlife species that eat those foods, write both a rural and urban wildlife plan and justify their reasons.

This year's event was hosted by Texas A&M University and sponsored by U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Chapman University, International Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation and National Rifle Association.

In Kentucky, the program is
