

Little Angels, new spring collection, available at Canterbury House

By Leigh Stein, Managing Editor
The whirling sound of a half dozen sewing machines and a ring of telephone mean one thing at Canterbury House. We've got the new line in and it's being shipped to stores along with a new, separate line. The Little Angels. We've got the new line in and it's being shipped to stores

Carol Sparks, co-owner of Canterbury House, a Carlsle textile industry. Created in December 1995 with the business sense and creativity of her daughter, Dr. Pam Stein, Canterbury House has tripled the orders this spring than it did all the time up until now.

"Have you noticed the phone keep ringing? We've noticed. It's just like a real business!" With its new brochures on the Little Angels Line, Kristen Leitcher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Greg Leitcher, looks up at the stained glass image of the Lord Jesus Christ at Carlsle Methodist Church by way of introduction to the line, in which 10 percent goes to the church for charity purposes.

"The Little Angels line is absolutely beautiful. I hope to begin sending it to churches." The Little Angels line is absolutely beautiful. I hope to begin sending it to churches. The line carries the same design and quality of fabric, but without the growl that we could make it more affordable. The church goes 10 percent and we hope they use that for charity. We're designing afternoons, while showing the collections.
