Carolyn Pope, RN, of Johnson Matthers Health Care, Inc. educates students from Nicholas County Kindergarten classes about what they might expect to happen if they had a visit to the Emergency Room.

Annual tour educates children
Johnson Matthers Health Care annually provides a tour of Nicholas County Hospital to alleviate a youngster's fear about hospitals, said Public Relations Director Josh Shepherd.

"We need to alleviate their fears so they understand what's going on and it also helps expand their knowledge. They'll see broken bones on an X-ray and see what it looks like when you swallow something you're not supposed to - that's always a highlight."

Shepherd said the hospital staff has provided Nicholas County Elementary kindergarten students with the tour for many, many years and feels it is a worthwhile endeavor. All four kindergarten classes visit in groups of 15 to 25 students each.

Registered Nurse Carolyn Pope helps give the tour in the emergency room with technician Paul Treadway. Pope emphasized to the children they don't have to fear needles and that the stings last just a few seconds. Several other staff members help with the tour and answer children's questions.
